NEW BOOKS.

The Public Library Board has just completed an extensive purchase of books from the MacMillan Company. Among the number we notice the following:

Arnold Haultian's Reminiscences of Canada's Grand Old Man, Goldwin Smith. The Life of Benjamin Disraeli by Monypenny.

The works on Canada are not waiting as is evidenced by The Picturesque St. Lawrence.—The story of our greatest river with an account of the places of interest near or along its banks. Canada, by J. I. Bealby, a comprehensive view of Canada's extent, resources, home life and sports. A History of Canada by our national poet Wilfred Campbell. This extensive work is beautifully illustrated and should have a place in every Public Library.

Sixty years of Protection in Canada Sport and Travel in the North land of Canada and Great American Universities add to the value of the list.

The most important purchase is the Cambridge Modern History.

This great Historical Library consisting twelve large volumes is a monument to the learning and scholarly industry of Lord Acton, and is the most valuable contribution to history ever produced in a single work. A Biographical Dictionary added to the reference Library, will no doubt be found useful to any one desiring reliable information concerning any important personage.

The musical element has been remembered by securing W. G. Mason's famous works, Beethoven and his Forerunners, from Greig to Brahms, and The Romantic Composers.

The young people will be pleased to learn that twenty-two new volumes from the Peeps in Many Lands series have been put upon the shelves. The older members could also gain much interesting information from a perusal of the little books.

Well selected publications upon South America, Egypt, Japan, Persia, China, Austria and India will furnish excellent reading for the long winter nights. The North Pole, by Peary and South African Trails by ex-President Roosevelt will be much sought after, and J. J. Hill's new book Highways of Progress, should be read by every one. Book such as those above referred to are the real source of any Public Library, books not for to-day or to-morrow, but books for all time, that will increase in value as they grow older.

While the Board has endeavoured to provide lighter reading for those whose inclinations are in that direction, yet they are laying in a store of good books which it is hoped will be much sought after by the more thoughtful and studious members.

Jackle goods, bake dishes, crumb trays, tea pots, and a full line of bath room accessories. Glass towel bars at BOYLE & SON'S.

BATH.

There died at Bath, on December 6th, Edward Wright, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years, and who, with the exception of a few years, spent the whole of his long life in this vicinity. Born in Kingston in 1821, of United Empire Loyalist stock, he received his early education in the schools of that city. At an early age he removed to Bath, where he later entered mercantile life, and during the many years he resided here, served as councillor, clerk, and in the various posi-

Not at All Private.

In the trial of a case recently in one of the English courts a witness was asked to repeat a conversation that she had with her husband. Objection was made that the question should not be answered because the conversation was private in its nature. The judge then asked the witness whether anybody except herself and husband was present. She replied that her mother and the husband's mother were, whereupon the judge remarked: "It appears that both mothers-in-law were present. I shall therefore rule that the conversation was public."

Struck by Lightning.

A lady riding in a train found herself seated by the side of an old matron who was exceedingly deaf.
"Ma'am," said she in a high tone,
"did you ever try electricity?"
"What did you say, miss?"
"I asked if you ever tried electricity for your deafness?"
"Oh, yes, indeed, I did; it's only last summer I got struck by lightning, but don't see as it done me a bit of good."

No Exposure For Him.

The member of the legislature of whom some graft stories had been circulated was about to build a house.
"You will want a southern exposure,
I suppose?" asked the architect.
"No, sir," said the man. "If you can't build this house without any ex-posure I'll get another architect."—

The Local Option Elections in the Province of Saskatchewan Were
Contested on an Even Vote.

Regina, Dec. 13.—The latest returns give no doubt but that local option has been defeated in Saskatchewan.
Out of twenty-six places heard from, the by-law was carried in seven and defeated in nineteen.

The only city to go dry was Moose Jaw, while Regina only defeated the measure by 89 votes and Saskatoon by 200, while Prince Albert defeated it by 321 of a majority.

Generally speaking, the by-law has been defeated in the cities and towns only one town out of eleven going dry and one city.

In the rural districts the measure received the greatest support.

In Saskatoon tenders are being called for the erection of the proposed new $250,000 hotel.

The business men of Saskatchewan voted against the measure.

The Pioneer, the official organ of the Dominion Alliance, in its issue of November 25th, says it has reason to be thankful for the officially recorded fact that the consumption of beer in Canada diminished per capita in 1908 to 1910 from 5,812 gallons to 5,270 gallons. The slight diminution in quantity of beer consumed is made up by a larger consumption of spirits. In local option districts whiskey drinking has almost driven beer drinking out of existence.—Railway News.

LOCAL OPTION

It is well known that the injurious effects of alcohol are especially marked in the growing child. But what do the brewers care, if only they can foster the habit which will fatten their purses? We remember reading of an officer of the Ohio Liquor League, who at one of his meetings boldly made this diabolical suggestion: "The success of our business is dependent largely upon the creation of appetite for drink. We who drink liquor, like others, will die, and if there is no new appetite created our counters will be empty as well as our coffers. After men are grown and their habits are formed, they rarely ever change in this regard. It will be needful therefore, that missionary work be done among the boys; and I make the suggestion, gentlemen, that nickles expended in treats to the boys now will return in dollars to your tills after the appetite is formed. Above all things, create appetite." And this diabolical advice suggests another liquor advertisement: "Golden Grain Whiskey tastes like more." Alas! how true that the first glass leads to the second, and so on until the victim is a slave to the appetite. "Avoid it; pass not by it; turn from it and pass away." Yes, it "tastes like more," but "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

H. H. Culver.

IT SAVES THE BOYS.

The best argument I have heard in Maine for Prohibition was an editor of a paper in Portland, that was for political reasons mildly opposed to it. I had a conversation with him that ran something like this:

"Where were you born?"
"In a little village about sixty miles from Bangor."

"Do you remember the condition of things in your village prior to the prohibition?"

"Distinctly. There was a vast amount of drunkenness, and consequent disorder and poverty."

"What was the effect of prohibition?"

"It shut up all the rum shops, and practically banished liquor from the village. It became one of the most quiet and prosperous places on the globe."

"How long did you live in the village after prohibition?"

"Eleven years, or until I was twenty-one years of age. Then I went to Bangor."

"Do you drink now?"

"I have never tasted a drop of liquor in my life."

"Why?"

"Up to the age of twenty-one I never saw it, and after that I did not care to take on the habit."

That is all there is in it. If the boys of the country are not exposed to the informality, the men are very sure not to be. This man and his school mates were saved from rum by the fact that the could not get it until they were old enough to know better. Few men are drunkards who know not the poison until they are twenty-one. It is youth the whiskey and beer men want. —North American Review.

Here is a statement from the town of Renfrew which tells its own story here continue to do so and express themselves as well pleased with the abolition of the bar-room. Employers cannot complain of their men not turning up to work on Monday mornings.

6. There has been no decline in hotel accommodation either in number or in quality. Any change in this respect has been for the better.

For the above reasons we give our testimony in favor of Local Option and recommend its adoption everywhere.

ANOTHER "BANISH THE BAR" CRY.

Such an arrangement of the Local Option Cry as that made in last week's issue is magnificent subject matter for Temperance addresses, and has been used for that purpose. The indictment is so wild and untrue that the youngest beginner on the platform may easily make it the groundwork for refutation.

Amongst other charges is this, that there is no diminution in drinking or drunkenness (clause 10). In answer to that, look at the schedule of summary convictions for the County of Lennox and Addington for the quarter ending Nov. 30th, 1910, and you will find that drink directly was the cause of 73 convictions, out of 103, in the town of Napanee alone, and of the remaining 25 one half are indirectly traceable to drink. Compare this with the same schedule of 1887, 8 and 9, under the Scott Act, when we are free to confess enforcement was at least spasmodic, and you will find that commitments for drunkenness for the whole three years were not half what they were last quarter. Where then do we stand when we remember that one of the reasons urged for the repeal of the Scott Act was "They have had their lesson, they will be careful now." Where is the care? For answer read the 11th clause of the Banish the Bar Article of the Vintners.

There has been warning enough of the temper of the Legislature as well as the Electorate of this Province of Ontario to cause, if not a halt, at least caution, and yet what do we find—that the past quarter's returns are the worst, by far, of the intervening time since the repeal of the Scott Act.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," but surely there is no method in the madness which prompts such statements as were sustained in the article referred to, and that of the Toronto Reporter who said

Here is a statement from the town of Renfrew which tells its own story and refutes many misrepresentations circulated by friends of the liquor traffic:

We, the undersigned citizens of the town of Renfrew subscribe to the following statement of conditions here since Local Option came into force six months ago:

1. The law has been well observed, only one man has been fined and he afterwards left town. No charges have been laid against any other person. Very little, if any, liquor is being sold here.

2. While there is yet some drinking of liquor brought in from other places where Local Option is not in force, by men who acquired the habit under license, we believe that there is not one tenth the drinking done here now that there was formerly under license.

3. Drunkenness, loafing and rowdiness have been very much less apparent in general and especially on holidays and fair days since the Act came into force.

4. There has been distinct evidence of improvement on the part of many formerly addicted to the drink habit and many women are deeply grateful for the change wrought in husbands and sons. Workmen are paying up arrears to fraternal societies. Those who never saved before are saving money now or improving their homes.

5. Many more buildings have been erected here this year than in any previous year. Cash payments are better. Farmers who formerly traded matte saved from rum by the fact that the could not get it until they were old enough to know better. Few men are drunkards who know not the poison until they are twenty-one. It is youth the whiskey and beer men want. North American Review.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," but surely there is no method in the madness which prompts such statements as were sustained in the article referred to, and that of the Toronto Reporter who saw double in Owen Sound. Let us have these assertions backed up by some authority and not mere vaporings of empty minds.

LOCAL OPTION FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT.

No doubt some of our business men have an honest conviction that local option if carried, would injure business in our town.

I notice in the Toronto Globe of Dec. 12th, that the Massey-Harris Co. have purchased the Johnston Harvester Co's business at Batavia, N. Y., at an outlay of between two and three million dollars.

The Hon. J. Melvin Jones Pres. and General Manager of the Massey-Harris Co., gives the following description of Batavia, which has a population of about 12,000 after referring to the shipping advantages he says:

"It is therefore an ideal city for manufacturing purposes, where the number of employees would not exceed 2,000 altogether, the city appeals to me as a place where most, or all, of the people are busy and happy. It has not a licensed liquor store or saloon within its limits."

Mr. Business man don't it strike you as very strange that a responsible company would invest so much capital in a temperance town if local option is detrimental. Judge ye for yourselves. CHAS. STEVENS.

DESERONTO.

At the meeting of the hockey enthusiasts of the town, the following were elected: President, R. S. Dewar; vice-president, Rev. A. H. Creggan; secretary-treasurer, Thomas Donnelly; manager, James Fairbairn; executive, W. Sagar, Geo. Houle, Alexander Therrien, Jr. The rink will be under the management of Thomas Warren. The Quite Navigation fleet has gone into Picton harbor for winter quarters. The steamer Reindeer has been hauled out on the ways here and will have extensive repairs made.

Mrs. John McCarthen, of Maybourn, Sask., is in town with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Joyce, Main street, her father being seriously ill.

At the January election, the town voters will be called upon to cast their vote for electric power from the Seymour company.

Mrs. R. Price and sons, Master Adrian and Edwin, came on Friday, from Stettler, Alberta, to spend some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gammon.

The funeral of the late Miss Lena Clifford, aged sixteen years, whose death occurred in Hotel Dieu, on Friday, Dec. 2nd, after a long illness, took place, on the following Sunday afternoon from her parents' residence to Ste. Vincent De Paul church, where Rev. Father J. P. Hartigan said a requiem mass after which the remains were placed in Deseronto cemetery vault. Besides her parents she survived by two sisters, Geraldine and Janet and two brothers, John and Thomas.

On Wednesday at noon, the fire brigade was called to the home of John Joyce, Green street, where the chimney and part of the roof was afire. Little damage was done.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Emens and Miss Florence, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. James Knox.

The ice has not become thick enough for rigs to travel, but people have walked from bay shore to town.

Hugh and Barney O'Rourke, of Watertown, Mr. and Mrs. Deane Clifford, of Bath, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clifford, of Picton, attended the funeral of their niece, the late Miss Lena Clifford.

The ladies' aid of the Presbyterian church meet with great success at their handkerchief bazaar.

W. A. GRANGE,
Clerk of the Town of Napanee.
Dated at Napanee this 29th day of November, A. D., 1910.

There are few novels in any language comparable to "Anna Karenina," "War and Peace," and "Resurrection." There are few writers of short stories who can be mentioned in the same breath with Tolstoi. Tourgenieff, from his death-bed, implored Tolstoi to let preaching alone and cultivate letters for his own and Russia's glory. What Tolstoi might have achieved in art had he heeded that appeal we cannot know. What he has achieved is, however, before us, and it is miraculous enough.

"When does he find time to observe, to study?" men have asked of authors like Balzac, Scott, Henry James. The same question may be asked of Tolstoi. He was astonishingly prolific, yet everything that ever came from his artistic pen was vital, realistic, profoundly true. He never "invented" or imagined scenes from life; he knew, he felt, he lived what he portrayed. How he knew remains a mystery, although he had exceptional opportunities. He knew men in peace and in war, in salon and in cottage, in the cornfield, and in the ministerial bureau, in the slum and prison, and in elegant and intellectual circles.

What was Tolstoi? He belonged to no school and started none. He was a remorseless realist, out Zolaing Zola in his minute descriptions of vice, baseness, sordidness, vulgarity, bestiality. But he was so realistic because he was so moral. He never compromised with the truth; he recorded what he thought good for the world to know. He was as great a psychologist as he was a realist, but he never made a parade of his analysis and dissection of character or conduct. In spite of his details he was never dull or photographic; his was not the "easy style" of piling facts upon facts. There was always selection in his treatment of facts, but the selection was not on the surface. Withal, there is a charm in much of Tolstoi's fiction—beauty, poetry, idealism. He could be as gentle and fascinating as Tourgenieff. There are some wonderfully attractive types and characters in his novels. And the effect of his art is elevating; he stirs the best, not the worst, of human passions. To read Tolstoi is to see life as it is—life with its tragedies, ugliness, sins, but also with its beauty, light, heroism, nobility.

As an offset to the reports of a dangerous uprising in Mexico we have had from the beginning assuring news concerning the condition of the country. How far they may be affected by self-interest we cannot say, but the so-called revolution has gone the way of all such

THE REALITY IN RELIGION

Character Is the Real Contribution Which Life Makes to the Whole World

character is the real contribution which life makes to the whole world

"Go, and do thou likewise."—Luke x., 37.

The vital points of any faith are not in its abstractions, but in its realities. The irreligion of our day is not that which scoffs at or is indifferent to other worlds and other times, but that which in the concrete realities of daily living moves indifference to the spirit of religion. You are a Christian only in the measure that all your life is practically dominated by Christian ideals.

If there are devils anywhere, how they must delight in the mockery of a faith which, while it fights bitterly for the least accent in a shibboleth and contends with logical zeal and consuming fervor for the smallest item of philosophical or historical statement yet blindly and placidly ignores the will of him whom it professes to worship and the expression of the ideals it professes to admire.

We seem to believe that if we could persuade all mankind to accept and agree on two or three great historical statements all the world would be religious. We forget how completely many are persuaded of the accuracy of these statements, who are, nevertheless, utterly irreligious in fact—who do not believe enough in their Master ever sincerely to try to put his plain teachings into ordinary practice.

THE DIFFICULTY

about any worthy religion lies not in its logic, but in the demands it makes on our lives. We are in the habit of seeking to establish the historicity of Jesus of Nazareth and of admiring his character, but we escape from the practical inferences of his life by saying, at least to ourselves, he was too much of an idealist; you cannot carry out his teachings in this age.

We argue over the spiritual significance of his words instead of seeking to demonstrate the practical advantage of doing his will.

How has it come to pass that, at least in the popular mind, the emphasis in religion is on creed rather than on character, on agreement as to words rather than on agreement for work?

Is it not because it has been found so much easier to write a creed than it is to develop character. And because we have so often chosen the easier way religion has lost value and power in the world.

Whenever the disputes over doctrines arise amongst men, we need to remember that the matter of supreme importance does not lie there. The point at which religion concerns us, the great searching questions that man's consciousness of his infinite possibilities puts to us, is whether we are realizing those possibilities. Religion asks of us what we are and whether we are striving after the realization of our better selves and our better world.

THE GREAT QUESTION

for us all is not so much the name we leave behind as the power we can give the world of wealth, of fame, of learning, but what we can give of an enriching personality; not the philosophy we may write, but the reality we give to ideals.

Character is the eternal increment of our world. Character is what I am, not what I may be thought to be, nor yet what I would like to be. It is the sum and result of all the impulses, habits, aspirations, desires, and passions of the life. It is the aroma and fragrance of a life or its stench and evil odor. It is of myself essentially and not superficially.

If the church fails at the point of character, she fails at every point. Her business is with the characters of man. No matter how exact her historical knowledge, no matter how satisfactory her philosophy, no matter how complex and efficient her organizations may be, unless she is so affecting the minds and hearts of men, so moving on their emotions and persuading their judgment, so controlling their habits that they grow into beauty of living, all her work is worse than useless.

Let men live their faith, and faith will be a living thing to them. If we believe in a God of love we must preach our belief by love to men, and if we believe in a fairer world we must demonstrate our faith by work to make this world better and life sweeter and more divine.

HEALTH

TEETH-PRESERVING FOODS.

In all the lessons given on the subject of the preservation of the teeth by the aid of the dentist and the tooth-brush, it is usual to lay stress on the fact that food is the arch-enemy of the teeth. But this is only a partial truth, the oppothinking before the light goes out, then go to sleep. Try to get the blood away from the head, not into it. To eat something light has this effect, and induces sleep, when reading would have the opposite effect. When you finally get ready for bed, draw some deep breaths of fresh air and lie down, not in a heap, but comfortably relaxed, a little on one side, preferably the right, so as to allow the heart free play.

HIS CHANCE

When the fidgety, elderly lady deplored the fact that she had inadvertently entered the compartment next to the engine, Arthur Greeson was among the first to reassure her.

"The worst in case of an accident? Not a bit! Just as likely for something to run into us from behind. And, if anything did happen, well—"

"We'd all get our names in the papers," observed a fellow-passenger.

"H'm!" remarked Mr. Greeson. "I don't want that, thanks! Had quite enough of it already."

"Oh!" The elderly lady leaned forward. "You don't mean to say you've been in a collision before?"

"Rather! Bad one it was, too! And a lot of other things have happened to me. Somehow, I can't seem to stir outside without I run across some excitement or other. I remember once—"

"Oh, go on, sir!"

"I was walking by the river only last summer when a boat upset just opposite. Four people in it. Had to take off my coat, and spoil the rest of a suit of clothes. None of them could swim. That just shows you!"

"And did you really dive in and—save them all?"

"What else could I do?" demanded Mr. Greeson. "Made me have a medal for it, and all that nonsense. That's what I meant just now. Affairs of that sort—one after the other!" He subsided wearily.

"Extraordinary!" The stout individual opposite assumed a profoundly solemn air. "Tell us some more! Have you ever been in a fire?"

A wink to the other occupants of the carriage escaped Mr. Greeson's notice. He lowered his paper again.

"Two; yes. Only one was nothing much."

"Let's have the yarn about the other."

After a little hesitation Mr. Greeson complied. He described the burning of a row of warehouses, and his own participation in the work or rescue.

"Just my luck to be on the spot and see those people at the windows! Ever tried to get up a staircase through a lot of smoke and sparks? Don't you, if you can help it."

His listeners glanced quickly from Mr. Greeson to another and back again. One or two lifted their eyebrows. But the girl at the far end of the compartment seemed to shrink into her corner. She turned her head away, as if in pain or distress. The elderly lady nodded many times, regarding Mr. Greeson with admiration.

"And how many lives," she queried, "have you saved altogether?"

"Don't know exactly. Never reckoned 'em up."

The stout man coughed behind his handkerchief.

"People talk a lot about the dangers of war, and suchlike," he reflected aloud; "but it seems to me our friend here could prove that dangerous uprising in Mexico we have had from the beginning assuring news concerning the condition of the country. How far they may be affected by self-interest we cannot say, but the so-called revolution has gone the way of all such outbreaks in the time of Diaz. It had the promise of wide popular support the promise was not kept. The actual demonstrations against the government were insignificant.

Is there, then, anything suggestive of general discontent? Sensational articles in American magazines have told of a crushing tyranny, and of the supreme control exercised by a syndicate of grafting politicians. But these articles are much too highly colored to be accepted as a guide. There are, however, certain facts that have been understood for years. The mass of the population consists of illiterate Indians and persons of mixed blood who are indifferent to politics. The dominant political machine has its own way at the elections, does just about what it pleases. It would be absurd to pretend that there is a free choice such as we enjoy. But many high-minded Mexicans of liberal sentiments have been willing to endure the loss of freedom because of the country's need of internal peace and security. They have accepted the strong administration of Diaz without a vigorous protest as the lesser of the two evils.

This was the situation twenty years ago and it seems to be the situation now. The death of Diaz and the attempt to perpetuate the power of his machine might bring about a radical change. But that the period of peace after sixty years of tumult has been a most welcome breathing spell cannot be doubted. Nor can it be doubted that Mexico has benefited greatly by the reign of peace.

THE FINAL HOPE.

"And," said the Old Party, proposing the toast of the evening at a silver wedding, "respecting our host I can say this—and I speak of him with great confidence—that a better fellow never lived."

Here he paused for effect, while the assembled guests gave vent to loud "Hear-hears." Then he resumed:

"I was present at his christening. I was present at a banquet given when he came of age. I was present at his wedding. I am present to-night to celebrate his silver wedding." (Hear, hear.) "And, ladies and gentlemen, in conclusion, I can only hope I shall be present at his funeral."

FEELING.

"I'll have to ask you to pay in advance," remarked the hotel-keeper.

"Isn't my luggage good enough security?"

"I fear it is a little too emotional."

"Emotional?"

"Yes; easily moved."

TEETH-PRESERVING FOODS.

In all the lessons given on the subject of the preservation of the teeth by the aid of the dentist and the tooth-brush, it is usual to lay stress on the fact that food is the arch-enemy of the teeth. But this is only a partial truth, the opposite of which is quite as true.

It is now fully recognized and taught by good dentists that food-stuffs are very valuable preventives of decay; but they must be the right foods and used in the right way.

Almost all adults, unless they are actually ill, or hopeless dietetic "cranks," will have included in their daily meals enough of the right sort of food. It is young children who are the principal sufferers from well-meant errors in this respect. There is a strong feeling that the transition from the purely liquid diet of babyhood to the solid diet of adult life should be made very slowly, and that the longer children can be kept on "slops" the less their systems will be taxed. This is a mistake.

When the first teeth make their appearance, it means that they are there to work. If a proper amount of hard foods is provided for them, they will not only work, but will at the same time do a great deal toward keeping themselves clean.

Decay in the teeth is the result of fermented food lodging in every little crack and crevice it can find. Every mouth, however clean and healthy, will always provide the conditions for this fermentation—warmth, moisture, exposure to the air, and the presence of bacteria. These bacteria of the mouth, which are always there, are powerless unless they get this stagnating, fermenting material to work with.

Food may be divided into two types—the soft, clinging, fermentable type, such as soft puddings, bread soaked in milk, bread and jam, all the things young children get so much of, and the firm and fibrous foods which demand mastication and crushing by the teeth, which thereby automatically cleanse them.

These fibrous foods stimulate mastication and carry the bacteria away, and they at the same time develop the jaws with the exercise so necessary to them. They also remove the sticky masses left by the soft foods, without which the bacteria cannot ferment or form acids.

It is not proposed for a moment that young children should not be allowed to have their bread and milk and all the usual long-established nursery foods, but it is urged that they should also be given enough of the fibrous foods to keep the teeth clean and to exercise the muscles. Give the little one whose first teeth are just through, a piece of crisp toast instead of a lump of doughy bread or biscuit, and let the older children finish up with apples or some other fresh fruit.—Youth's Companion.

FRESH AIR FOR SLEEP.

Do not go to bed tired and cramped and brain-weary, in a close room and lie in a huddled, tense heap, thinking for hours and tossing about. If you can't get relief to your lungs by fresh air before retiring, insist upon plenty in the sleeping chamber. Undress and think and busy yourself in some trivial manner in a comfortable lounging robe. Do all your fresh air and me down, not in a heap, but comfortably relaxed, a little on one side, preferably the right, so as to allow the heart free play.

SMALLEST IN BRITAIN.

The smallest house in Great Britain is in the quaint town of Conway, North Wales. This house is 300 years old and consists of two rooms, one above the other, each of which is just two yards square. The upstairs room, which is reached by mounting a tiny ladder, has in it a 4-foot bed and a washstand, leaving but little room for the occupant to move about.

JUSTICE IN CRETE.

How it was Administered by a Young British Officer.

The British subaltern, as readers of many of Mr. Kipling's army tales are well prepared to believe, often acquires himself admirably of varied tasks of pacification, education and administration, as well as of warfare, among strange peoples.

A very young officer whom Mr. D. G. Hogarth found in Crete some ten years ago, acting as temporary head of a disturbed district, was entirely of the Kipling type of mingled simplicity, self-confidence, pluck, integrity and common sense—a man able to meet any emergency.

"He knew no word of Greek," relates Mr. Hogarth, "and it was told of him that when he arrived on a polo pony to be a father to some twenty villages, the local bishop called in state, bringing, as the ingratiating custom is, a turkey or two and a clutch of eggs. The young lawgiver, nosing a bribe, put him promptly into the street—eggs, turkey and all."

This unintentional affront to the church was soon explained and due apologies offered—but it proved, after all, not to be an error which lessened public confidence in the overhasty young man's administration of justice. Mr. Hogarth attended his court one morning.

"The judge presided in knickerbockers and a cricket shirt—for the day was warm—and smoked his briar pipe. A peasant, whose sheep had been driven off, had heard after many days a tinkling by night on the distant hillsides, and claimed that he knew his bells again.

"Did, then, one sheep-bell so differ from another? Young Solomon put it to the test.

"He sent his soldier-servant to collect bells from the village shepherds, and on his return locked the man into an inner room with the collection, while the shepherd waited in court. After a jangle behind the door, the judge asked whose bell had tinkled. On the witness of the soldier the shepherds were right every time."

So the complaining peasants' ability to recognize his own bells was established, and he was able to prove his case and recover his stolen sheep.

"Ah, this is justice!" cried the delighted head man of the village, as the session ended. "We have not known it before in Crete."

A withered vegetable may be freshened by soaking it for some time in cold water, but it will never be the same as the fresher one.

queried, have you saved altogether?"

"Don't know exactly. Never reckoned 'em up."

The stout man coughed behind his handkerchief.

"People talk a lot about the dangers of war, and suchlike," he reflected aloud; "but it seems to me our friend here could prove that you are never really safe, wherever you are."

"That's true," confirmed Mr. Greeson. "There was a mad dog once, and one or two runaway horses. Then, one night last September, I was just going home—rather late it was—along my road. There was a policeman at the corner, and I was nearly up to him, when three fellows sprang out of a garden. Burglars! Thought they'd been noticed. Took us by surprise. It was a fight, I can tell you! Big chaps they were, and one was wanted for murder, we found out afterwards."

"But what happened? Did you—"

"We managed 'em all right. I was three months in hospital over that. You ought to have seen what they called my photo in the weeklies. Talk about a libel!"

"Why, you must be quite a celebrity."

"You're a wonder, really!"

"Never heard anything like it."

Mr. Greeson scanned them rather suspiciously in turn. There was something in their voices which almost suggested sarcasm. But they were ready with grave faces.

"About these newspaper reports. I reckon you've been mentioned a good many times, for one thing or another."

Before Mr. Greeson could reply, the girl in the corner stirred, and made a movement as if to stretch out her hand. Then she looked down again, breathing fast.

"Sounds rather ridiculous; but I—I've got 'em all pasted in a book."

"And—er—the name is?"

"Greeson—Arthur Greeson!"

They seemed to ponder deeply.

"Funny thing I don't remember ever seeing it."

"Nor me, either."

"You wouldn't remember," affirmed Mr. Greeson.

"No," agreed the elderly lady; "there you're right: But I shall keep a good look-out for it in future. You do seem so unfortunate, Mr. Greeson, about getting into trouble."

There were a few sniggers. He looked up sharply.

"I shouldn't call it trouble exactly. Rather a nuisance, though; I must say that. Take people getting run over. Why, I can hardly step outside without having to drag someone out of the way of a taxicab. It gets a bit wearisome, sometimes. Besides, a motor-bus broke my leg once, and the blessed kid wasn't hurt a bit."

"Oh, hard luck!" chuckled the stout man exhaustedly. The rest grinned openly now, except the elderly lady. The girl in the corner, too, flushed and bit her lip.

"You don't believe me?" demanded Mr. Greeson, turning from side to side.

"Why, yes!" affirmed the elderly lady. Most of the others laughed.

"If you'd come round home with me, I could show you all the cuttings from different newspapers. Not that I want to make out that I'm anything wonderful, but—" He fixed the stout man with his eye. "You seem jolly amused.

What have you ever done in that way, anyhow?"

"Nothing at all, I grant you. Never been so unlucky. Where do you live, sir, by the by?"

"The next stop's where I get out, and at the rate we're going now—"

Even as he spoke, the carriage rocked strangely. All were jolted from their seats. The elderly lady screamed. The stout man, struggling, suddenly white-faced, to the window, was thrown headlong. There were shouts of alarm. Then came a crash, and a violent shock. The whole compartment heaved and turned sideways. In passing the points the engine had left the lines.

A muffled explosion followed as the first half of the wrecked train came finally to rest against the platform of the little, unimportant station. Among Mr. Greeson's fellow-passengers no one moved until smoke and sparks began to rise from above them. Then the stout man raised his head stupidly from beneath the pile of splintered woodwork which was pressing him down.

He was half buried and in comparative darkness. He could not repress a groan at the discovery that his legs were pinned. He heard nothing of the other cries on every side, of the sobs and prayers for aid. He began to mutter queerly, with his eyes closed.

"What's happened? Ah, I'm hurt! I can't see!"

The quavering voice came from below him, but he was quite unconscious of it. He lay very still. On his right, presently, a movement began—a writhing, punctuated by quick intakings of breath. A hand that appeared, an arm. Mr. Greeson dragged, and pushed, and lifted. After a time he wriggled free, and stumbled to his feet.

He saw a head and shoulders almost immediately, and, staggering across, began awkwardly, working with one arm only, to move the beam which the stout man prisoner. It was a long and heavy task.

"Thanks—thanks! Leave me alone now. Look for the others. See it—"

He pointed with a shaking finger. Water was pouring through the roof now, hissing on the flames. Mr. Greeson beat out the rest with his hands, then, turning slowly and painfully, started to clear the compartment floor.

Desperately, he answered a hail from outside, and soon a rescuer looked in through a crevice, assuring them of a speedy release when axes had been procured. The stout man supported the girl and the elderly lady as best he could in his dazed condition, and watched stupidly as Mr. Greeson labored. Another passenger was visible soon, and then—

"Don't let the women look!" said Mr. Greeson, thickly.

They were reviving slowly. The stout man tried to reassure them, and dissuade them from turning their heads. But the girl would strain to follow Mr. Greeson's figure, though he interposed, as far as he could, between her and what it was better that she should not see.

"Brandy!" called someone in the distance. "Only a little each. That's all we can spare." And his hand stretched through, balancing the glass carefully.

The elderly lady sipped, the girl also. Then the stout man murmured a request.

On the Farm

KEEPING FARM ACCOUNTS.

In successful farming, as in any other business, some intelligent system of account keeping is important. To what an extent it may help the farmer to find out what ills beset his farm is shown in the following account of one New England man's experience. He had inherited a large fine farm from his father, and was making a living on it, but it was not nearly as good a living, he felt, as he ought to be making. He had said many times that there was not much money in farming, and he believed it; but he was fifty years old, he knew no other business, so he had kept on.

A few years ago the question came into his mind whether this unprofitableness was common to everything on the farm—whether, bad as the business appeared to be, there might not be some department that was paying a little better than the others. If this were so, he might enlarge that department, and restrict or eliminate the things that did not pay.

A system of account-keeping was forthwith begun, and kept up for a year. It disclosed some unlooked for facts. The farmer found that his poultry—the least considered and most carelessly managed department of his farm—was yielding a profit far in excess of what he supposed anything on the place was paying. The sheep, of which he had always kept a moderate-sized flock, came next. Like the chickens, they were bringing him a better profit than he had supposed. But his dairy, which had always been considered the most important element of his farm, and which included a large herd of cows, was barely self-supporting.

The thought of this was discouraging. Thirty years of milking and churning and pan-washing and long hours, all for nothing! The truth was forced upon him that during all these years he had been living on his sheep and poultry and some few incidental products, and carrying on his dairy to no purpose.

However, it was not too late to mend. He determined to dispose of his cows, and to increase his sheep and poultry—the things that paid. But an acquaintance, to whom he told the result of his account keeping and his present resolution, gave him some counsel.

"Wait a bit," said he. "It's of course wise to increase your sheep and poultry, for you know now that they pay you well. But keep in mind how you found it out. Carry your account-keeping further, sift still more thoroughly, and see if you are not keeping some cows at a loss, while others are turning you a fair profit. A dairy of good cows, properly managed, ought not to be a losing game."

A record was now kept of what each separate cow yielded of milk and butter. This brought out the fact that some of the cows were paying very well indeed; but the number of those that were only self-supporting and those that were kept at a loss was so great that it brought the profit on the whole herd down to nothing.

THE MEDICINE OF CHINA

CELESTIALS CLING TO OLD MIXTURE OF DRUGS.

Different Medicines are Ordered on Different Days for the Same Ailment.

To the Western mind there is nothing more curious in Chinese customs than the persistency with which the Celestials have clung throughout the centuries to their system of medicine, an odd mixture, for the most part, of superstition and hidebound conservatism.

In the Chinese materia medica we find almost every kind of vegetable, animal and mineral substance, and these reach about the number of 1,000—a remedy, as someone has put it, for each disease to which, from the Chinese viewpoint, man is liable. Roughly speaking, the Chinese medicines are derived about as follows:—

From metals and stones 138 kinds of physic are extracted; from grasses and vegetables, such as roots, stubs, leaves, flowers and seeds, 350 kinds; from trees, 130 kinds are found in the roots, bark, trunk, leaves, seeds, flowers; from the human body 27 kinds; from vegetables, such as cabbages, turnips, and birds, 34 kinds; from bugs, worms, shellfish, snakes, turtles and flies, 100 kinds; from fruits, 40 kinds; from vegetables, such as cabbages, turnips, melons, etc., 62 kinds. And to all these must be added medicines derived from wheat, corn and other grains.

MATERIALS USED.

The Chinese materia medica is indebted to the animal world to a considerable extent. Nostrums are made from the teeth and horns of the "dragon," musk from the musk deer, and the list also includes bear's gall, deer's glue, sheep's milk, glue made from a black mule's hide, ram's horn, mare's milk, hoof of a white horse, thigh of a bay horse, sheep's lungs, horns, kidneys and gall; deer's horn pulverized, and the bones, eyes and claws of a tiger. The skull, heart, brains, teeth and blood of the dog are much esteemed.

With respect to the practice of the Chinese doctor it may be said that, to Occidental notions, the most curious of it is that the physician is employed by the year, and that his salary stops when any of the family to which he ministers becomes ill. In other words, he is paid only for keeping them in good health.

The Chinese doctor believes in giving "like for like"—that is to say, poison for poison—and so it follows that he employs in his practice almost every element known to nature. His medicine is no joke—it is

PRETTY FAR REACHING

One odd thing about the Chinese doctor's prescriptions is that different medicines are ordered on different days for the same ailment, a feature of treatment that has its origin in the Chinese belief that the human system is not the same at all times. For instance, the Celestials will tell you that there are some 50 or 60 kinds of heart disease, 20 or

Fashion Hints

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPE.

The newest muffs are enormous. Suede is a favorite material for belts.

Cravats of beadwork with tassels are new and odd.

Aigrettes and paradise plumes will be worn more and more.

Short, straight cut jackets and narrow skirts are the rule.

Jackets button over at the side, and usually sport a sailor collar.

Irish crochet lingerie pins for the neck and belt are fashionable.

The boyish jacket must be avoided by all who are not youthful in figure.

Decidedly new are belt buckles entirely covered with close set beading.

Hats are delightfully picturesque this season no matter what their size.

Belts of wampum—that is Indian beads—are easily made and are unique and pretty.

Some of the cleverest touches of the toilet are found in the back of the new costumes.

The squawlike fashion of wearing tails, heads and paws is discarded by well dressed women.

Gored or semi-circular styles in skirts are given the preference over cluster pleated models.

White tipped black fox fur is being cut and mounted like quills, as a rival to its feathered cousins.

Silks, satins, velvets and furs—especially sealskin—are much used for the new winter hats and toques.

Unpretentious blouses may be smartened and brightened by a few beads carefully selected as to color.

More fashionable than the long nap or furry beaver is the one that has shorter fur and is smooth and shiny.

Tassels are utilized in all sorts of original styles in the decoration of the winter frocks and coats for children.

In some of the elaborate gowns the overskirt is frequently cut into pieces, one crossing over the other in surplice effect.

Muffs, scarfs, and turbans for school girls are made of serge or velvet bordered with fur.

The mode of hairdressing follows the Roman tendency, and head-dresses of pearls, ribbon, and jewels are much worn.

Indian shawls are now cut up and fashioned into handbags, purses, slippers, muffs—in fact, into almost every accessory of dress.

Large, black velvet, old English hats are decked to the limit in white or pale colored plumage, but not with the willow plumes.

Faded roses is a favorite color for outer garments for children this winter. Felt hats of the same color can also be procured.

Lovely veiled effects in blouses for cloth suits, the top layer of chiffon or net usually matching the cloth, are made in all colors.

Drooping plumes are to be worn upright at the side or back of high helmetlike hats, as a final manifestation of the chantecler style.

New veilings show interwoven circles as large as half a dollar, and close rows of lattice work with a thick spot at each intersection.

"Brandy" called someone in the distance. "Only a little each. That's all we can spare. And his hand stretched through, balancing the glass carefully.

The elderly lady sipped, the girl also. Then the stout man murmured a request.

"Not for me!" returned Mr. Greeson deliberately. "Drink it up! I'm all right!"

It seemed hours before they heard axes at work near by. The noise drew nearer gradually.

"Stand back! Get as far away as you can!"

Willing hands helped the women out. The stout man followed with difficulty, falling shakily backwards. Mr. Greeson lifted his unconscious companion forward, but he could not climb himself. Two platelayers raised him gently.

"Ere, doctor, 'ave a look at 'im, when you've got a minute."

"The others first. Only want to sit down for a bit," insisted Mr. Greeson dully, and fainted.

The doctor bent over him. The girl was at his elbow.

"Left arm broken, two ribs, badly burnt, too." The girl cried out.

"Quiet, please! I'll do what I can. Then will you sit by him?"

"No one else shall!" declared the girl, almost fiercely.

She was still holding his limp hand, when a small figure approached in wild alarm.

"My boy! Where's my boy?"

"Mrs. Greeson!" called the girl soothingly, and comforting her, explained.

"Might ha' been worse. Yes, miss, that's true enough."

She peered closer. "You! Jessie Crane, from nex' door! Hadly knew you at first, I declare. An' faw, you've only been away a-gut-teen months or so! You—you was with 'im, then?"

"In the same carriage," the girl answered. "He hadn't recognized me. But you—you ought to have seen him. How pale he was. Hurt like that, and to be put out the fire, they told me, and saved—"

Mr. Greeson's mother was weeping.

"Just like my boy! Always modest. Never a word about 'isself. To 'ear 'im talk you'd never think—"

The stout man behind her, catching the girl's eye, laid a finger on his lips, and nodded hurriedly.

"He wouldn't boast, I'm sure," said Jessie Crane unsteadily. "You must be very glad that—that he's your son!"

"Always knew he was brave," stated the old woman proudly, "though he's never 'ad a chance to prove it, up to now. So pleased 'e'll be when 'e knows. It's always been 'is one ambition to git 'is name in the newspapers, 'an now 'e's done it at last."—London Answers.

RIVAL EMPIRES.

A Jamaican nigger once had some words with a nigger from Martinique. In the course of their argument he from Jamaica exclaimed, contemptuously:

"Yah! you great, big ugly Frenchman! Yah! What did we give you at Waterloo, eh?"

It is said that all his mean acts are quickly brought up before a drowning man—and the same might be said of a candidate for office.

tact that some of the cows were paying very well indeed; but the number of those that were only self-supporting and those that were kept at a loss was so great that it brought the profit on the whole herd down to nothing.

The work of recognition and readjustment on the farm was now begun in earnest. The poultry was increased until, in a few years, the number of hens ran into the thousands. As many sheep were kept as the pastures would carry. In the dairy all the worthless cows were disposed of and replaced by those about whose qualities at the pail there was no question.

A further record was kept of the different foods and the milk that resulted, and a ration lower in cost and upon which the cows gave even more milk was adopted. Improved machinery, lessening the cost of labor, was installed in the dairy-house, and closer attention was paid to selling, so as to market the product to the best possible advantage.

The result is that the dairy now pays an entirely satisfactory profit. With this and his sheep and poultry-keeping, the farmer has prospered greatly. And all this prosperity, together with the masterly grasp upon his business which comes from knowing just what he is about, was made possible by keeping accounts.

The experience of this farmer shows how important the keeping of farm accounts is to all. It matters not how large or how small the farm is; no really good business can be done without knowing just what one is doing and the profit that can be reasonably expected in each department. Even the amateur, who keeps only a few hens and cultivates a little garden for home use, will find it more satisfactory to be able to compare the result with what it cost.

The question is often asked how farm accounts should be kept. All that is necessary is to keep them so that the disbursements and receipts in each department can be readily seen, and the profit or loss easily figured. The simpler the system, the better. In the expense account should be all the money, or its equivalent, that is paid out; in the receipts account all the money, or its equivalent, that is taken in.

The cash is very easily kept track of. Charging or crediting its equivalent is not quite so simple, but requires only the exercise of a little common sense. What costs the farmer something—as, for instance, the use of his team in plowing for a given crop—should be reckoned at the actual cost, which in this case is the cost of maintenance while the work is being done. Whatever the farmer produces that is used at home—as poultry, pork, eggs, and so forth—should be reckoned at exactly the cash the products would sell for.

The whole secret of successful account-keeping for the farm consists in simply setting down, for his own information and future reference, the expenses and receipts of the various departments of his farm.

"I am a poor man." "When we are married, I can learn to cook." "Hadh't you—er—better begin practising," suggested the thrifty suitor, "while your father is yet supplying the raw material, so to speak."

ent medicines, are ordered on different days for the same ailment, a feature of treatment that has its origin in the Chinese belief that the human system is not the same at all times. For instance, the Celestials will tell you that there are some 50 or 60 kinds of heart disease, 20 or 30 forms of consumption and perhaps 100 varieties of dyspepsia. Your true Chinese physician will claim that he can with correctness successfully diagnose without asking his patient a question. Opium and ginseng form no unimportant part of the Chinese materia medica, and when the doctor in the Flowery Kingdom has exhausted every other remedy he turns to the above-mentioned drugs.

In addition to his medical knowledge the Chinese doctor also claims the power to exorcise the evil spirits through whose agency we humans are supposed to be afflicted.

When a Chinese doctor administers a dose to his unfortunate patient he permits himself

NO HALF-WAY MEASURES

Indeed, he gives the patient as large a dose as he thinks he can stand. For example, in one Chinese remedy for a cold there are nine ingredients, and the pill wherein they are contained is something larger than a boy's marble. Besides the medicine for the cold there may be included others for other complaints of which the physician may suspect the patient to be afflicted, the theory in this instance being that by administering several kinds of medicine at once the "channels" of the system will conduct those remedies to the different portions of the body and thus hit the right spot.

ROYAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Pope Receives Greatest Number of Missives.

If one were asked to speculate as to the sovereign whose daily mail bag was the greatest one would hazard the Kaiser. But no. Then most will say it ought to be. On the unimpeachable authority of a Paris contemporary we learn that the Pope is the recipient of the greatest number of missives, says the London Globe.

The mail of his Holiness consists on the average of 23,000 letters, newspapers, &c. To go through this mass thirty-five secretaries are kept employed.

The President of the United States receives 1,000 letters daily and about 4,900 journals and books.

The Kaiser's mail consists of 4,000 letters and frequently the same number of books and papers. Our King, we learn, is favored with 1,000 letters a day and over 2,000 newspapers and books.

The Czar is not overworked in this respect for a sovereign, his Majesty's mail being given at 650 letters, &c., per day. The Kings of Italy and Spain have to deal with about 300 letters each.

Queen Wilhelmina is still more favored, with 150 letters, &c. But President Fallieres, of France, is still more fortunate, for we are told that he receives few letters and hardly any papers.

Returns For October Show It Is Not Diminishing

A despatch from Toronto says: In the eighteen cities reporting to Construction for October, the total aggregate for permits issued amounted to $8,683,269, as compared with $4,570,506 in the same month of last year. Toronto's total which approximates the three million mark, reflects an expansion that is little short of marvelous; but at that, considering the size of the two cities, it is hardly more remarkable than the showing made at Vancouver, where work amounting to $1,286,955 was undertaken as against $507,615 in the month of October, 1909.

Peterboro's loss of 11 per cent. was the greatest decrease noted. Ottawa recorded an investment of $438,925, equivalent to a gain of 18 per cent.; while Hamilton, with a like increase, issued permits aggregating in value, $318,330. Fort William also made an advancement of 8 per cent., and Kingston's permits amounted to $23,317. Port Arthur registered an increase of 731 per cent., the largest proportionate gain in the list. Other gains noted are:—Windsor, 82 per cent.; Berlin, 43 per cent.; and London, 2 per cent.

In Winnipeg permits were issued to the extent of $530,150. Calgary had a total of $568,290, a gain of 40 per cent., while Victoria and Regina are ahead by 18 and 376 per cent. respectively, the figures in the latter cases amounting to $247,975, as against $52,080 last year.

Montreal's great total of $1,907,140 is the second largest amount noted, and represents an investment of $1,278,795 more than was made on the same month last year. St. John also records an advance, a gain of 149 per cent.; although Sydney, in the same section, is a trifle behind her corresponding amount.

SHOT DEAD BY YOUNG CHILD.

Strange Accident to Young Hunter in Norfolk County.

A despatch from St. Thomas says: At Beech Lane, Norfolk County, James Pickensgill, aged 16 years, was instantly killed on Wednesday by being shot through the neck by a child four years of age. Pickensgill, with a companion, William Williamson, was out shooting rabbits, after which they went to Williamson's home for dinner. They stood their guns in the corner of the room, when the baby brother of young Williamson took the gun and pointed it at Pickensgill, who was sitting on the floor, and pulled the trigger. The full charge struck the victim in the neck and head, causing instant death. Deceased was a son of William Pickensgill, of Fairground.

Struck Father With Hammer, then Cut His Own Throat.

A despatch from Sherbrooke, Que., says: One of the worst tragedies ever enacted in the Eastern Townships occurred on Friday evening at Danville, resulting in the death of a father and son. James Houston, a grocer, and his son, James, were at work in the furnace room and the son was using a hammer. It is surmised that the latter struck his father with the hammer, as, when found dead, the indications pointed to death resulting from a blow on the head. The son then took his own life, hacking his throat and body in a shocking manner. He had but recently returned from Victoria, B.C. He was in

BANK OF MONTREAL.

Report of Annual Meeting.

The 93rd annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held at the head office of the company on December 5th, with Mr. R. B. Angus, the president, in the chair. The annual statement submitted was one of the best in the history of this financial institution. The Bank of Montreal, which is so ultimately bound up with the financial history of this country, has become the strongest of our financial institutions. At the present her total assets have reached the enormous sum of $240,000,000. With her 147 branches scattered throughout the country the bank is able to keep in close touch with the business interests of every community, and is doing her full share in promoting the financial and industrial development of the country.

The annual report showed a balance of profit and loss on Oct. 31, 1909, of $603,796. The profits for the year ended Oct. 31, 1910, after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, was $1,797,992, making the total profits $2,401,789. From this was deducted four quarterly dividends at 2½ per cent., amounting altogether to $1,440,000, leaving a balance of profit and loss carried forward at the end of October, 1910, of $961,789.

A further examination of the report shows that the bank has deposits bearing interest of over $154,000,000, while considerably over $43,000,000 is on deposit not bearing interest. During the year the deposits had increased by $18,000,000, an indication of the bank's growth. The note circulation of the bank amounted to $14,502,000, being slightly larger than the paid-up capital. The bank has a rest or reserve account of the large sum of $12,000,000. The amount of call and short loans in Great Britain and the United States was reduced by $14,000,000 during the year and now amounts to $61,918,000. This amount of money is kept on call in New York and London at a low rate of interest, as the bank finds it less disturbing to Canadian business interest to have it on deposit in foreign centres. It it were on deposit in Canada and were demanded at a few hours' notice it might seriously embarrass local institutions.

The loans and advance made by the bank during the year show an increase of $21,000,000, indicating that the bank is doing its full share in assisting in the development of our rapidly growing country. Altogether the financial statement is one of the most creditable ever presented by Canada's premier financial institutions. The business transacted has been large, the profits to the bank have been satisfactory, the deposits, loans, circulation, as well as the assets have all increased throughout the year. Today the bank is in a better position than ever to cater to the needs of the business communities, and better able to assist in the financial development of the country than ever before.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

James McGregor, of North Bay, Dying When Found.

A despatch from Parry Sound says: James McGregor, a stonemason, who has resided here a number of years, was on Friday morning found near his home in a badly frozen condition, and died shortly after being found. McGregor has been addicted to drink, and it is thought he was trying to reach home in an intoxicated condition and was overcome by the intense cold of the night, the temperature registering 10 degrees below zero. McGregor's hands and face were badly cut from his falling and trying to make his way on his hands and knees.

New Brunswick Man Drowned Crossing Lake on Poles.

A despatch from Fredericton, N. B., says: Word of a drowning accident at Indian Lake, Sudbury County, has reached here. Hedley Holmes, of Lakeville Corner, was returning from a camp in the lumber woods, and had to cross Indian Lake on the ice. He evidently ex-struck his father with the hammer, as, when found dead, the indications pointed to death resulting from a blow on the head. The son then took his own life, hacking his throat and body in a shocking manner. He had but recently returned from Victoria, B.C. He was in poor health.

GAS EXPLODED IN VAULT.

Repository of Brockville's Civic Records was Wrecked.

A despatch from Brockville says: Victoria Hall, a large stone building in which are located the civic offices, police headquarters, etc., was partially wrecked on Sunday night by an explosion of gas. City Clerk Dewey had occasion to enter the vault. The apartment was charged with gas from a leakage, and immediately on striking the match to light the jet a terrific explosion occurred which crumbled the vault in pieces, rent partitions asunder and blew out almost every pane of glass in the large structure. The corporation papers and documents were saved. Windows were broken in buildings two blocks away.

An engine and seven cars were burned as a result of a collision near Sedgewick, Sask.

HUNG BY BELT FROM POLE

A Lineman at Niagara Falls Received 2,200 Volts.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says: A man dangling in mid-air from a 40-foot pole on a high power line, unconscious and held in suspension by his leather safety belt, with hands bleeding and scared to the bone from a 2,200 voltage shock here on Friday, thrilled hundreds. The man was John Riddell, lately from Fort William, Ont. He is employed on the city electrical staff. He had been making a connection with a live wire carrying 2,200 volts, when in some manner he received a shock that carried the full voltage through his body.

The shock hurled him from the cross arm where he had been working and in the fall his belt caught and saved him from being dashed to the ground, nearly 40 feet below. Riddell was assisted down from the pole. He quickly regained consciousness and it was found that the thumb on one hand and the index finger on the other were burned through to the bone.

600 LEFT DEAD ON THE FIELD

5,000 Men Attacked a French Column In West Africa

A despatch from Paris says: An official note issued on Wednesday gives details of the fighting in French West Africa between the combined forces of three Sultans and a body of 300 French troops. The note states that Lieut.-Col. Moll, with a force of 500 men, entered Dridgele, the capital of Massalit, on November 3. On November 9 the Sultans of Massalit, Doudmouch and Wadai, with a combined force of 5,000 men, made a furious attack on the small French column. The tribesmen were driven off after hard fighting. They left 600 dead on the field, including the Sultan of Massalit. The Sultan of Doudmouch was wounded.

The French also suffered severely. Lieut.-Col. Moll, a lieutenant, two adjutants, three sergeants and twenty privates were killed, while twelve others are missing; and one officer, three non-commissioned officers and fifty-nine privates were wounded.

Lieut. Maillard, who has taken command of the French column, telegraphs that all is quiet at Abcher, where he is strongly entrenched. The place, he says, is still well garrisoned.

The Government has ordered reinforcements sent, but it will be six weeks before they can reach the scene.

MONEY STOLEN.

Mysteriously Disappeared From the Safe in C. N. R. Station.

A despatch from Sudbury says: After three days of an exhaustive search the local police, with the assistance of men from the Thiel Detective Service, located late Saturday night the man who on Wednesday last robbed the safe in the C. N. R. station here of an express package containing $275. It was J. Adamson, a lineman; and he was caught red-handed in the basement of the station, where he went to get the money from its hiding place. He pleaded guilty before the magistrate, and was sentenced to six months in jail.

A MOTHER'S AWFUL DEED.

Cuts Her Baby's Throat, Then Attempts Suicide.

A despatch from Hamilton says: Mrs. Henry Patience, Campbell avenue, Kenilworth, killed her four-year-old son, Harry, on Monday night, almost severing his head from his body with a razor, and then cut her own throat, almost severing the windpipe, so that it is thought she cannot recover. She is supposed to have done the deed in a fit of insanity. The tragedy was discovered about 5.30, when another son, Bert, returned. He found the house locked, and secured the assistance of neighbors. The horrible spectacle of the dead boy and the mother, lying in pools of blood, met their gaze when they broke in. The woman's husband is almost crazed with grief. The woman was rushed to the hospital. From the traces of blood it was evident that after committing the deed the woman ran about the house, and had evidently tried to set fire to the house. Although she appeared to be rational, it is believed that she was the victim of a sudden attack of insanity. When a young woman she suffered from brain fever.

ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM.

Peter Steffens, a young German, Captured at St. Catharines.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: After having been held by the police for several days for creating a disturbance at the hospital Peter Steffens, a young German, was released a few days ago, the Reo Auto Company agreeing to give him work. Wednesday afternoon, however, W. Dean, attendant at the Hamilton Asylum, arrived in the city and identified Steffens as the man who escaped from the institution on the twenty-ninth of November. Steffens was again arrested by Chief Green, who handed him over to Dean, and the demented man was taken back to the hospital. He may be deported to Germany.

FIGHT PLAGUE IN MANCHURIA

Authorities Rushing Physicians From all Points in Siberia.

A despatch from Harbin says: The authorities are hurrying physicians to Manchuria from all points in Siberia to fight the plague. ##### Intercolonial Express Crashed into Light Engine.

A despatch from Montreal says: Four men, all train employees, were killed and seven others injured, only one seriously, in an accident on Saturday night on the Grand Trunk Railway a quarter of a mile west of St. Hyacinthe on the Portland line, when the Intercolonial Railway's Nicolet train crashed into a light Grand Trunk engine. The dead are:—C. Biggs, conductor, and W. Walker, engineer on the light engine, and R. Jamieson, engineer, and M. Dionne, fireman, of the Intercolonial train. The road at this point is double tracked, and the accident was due to the light engine taking the wrong track after leaving St. Hyacinthe. Both the engineer and conductor on this engine were killed, but the fireman, McMillan, escaped, though his legs were badly crushed.

The Steamers Leaving Canada Carry a Great Many Passengers

A despatch from St. John, N. B., says: While a very large number of people are on their way to the Old Country to spend the Christmas season at home, the number leaving England to spend the holiday on this side of the Atlantic is not small. About 2,000 newcomers are en route to St. John in four steamers, the Allan liner Grampian, the C. P. R. liner Empress of Britain, the C. P. R. liner Lake Manitoba from Liverpool, and the C. P. R. liner Montreal of the London and Antwerp service. All have heavy passenger lists.

The number now en route home, including those who sailed on the Allan liner Victorian on Thursday, is 4,357, in five steamers. The Allan turbine Victorian, which sailed on Friday, took away about 1,200. The Lake Manitoba sailed on Monday, and the Empress of Britain on the 16th, are the C. P. R. Christmas sailings, while the Victorian sailing on Friday, and the Grampian on the 15th, are the Allan's Christmas sailings, as are the Athenia that sailed on Thursday and the Cassandra, on Tuesday. While it is not possible yet to give any figures it is anticipated that all these steamers will carry a great many passengers.

SETTLERS POURING IN.

The Immigration Returns to the End of August.

A despatch from Ottawa says: During the first five months of the present fiscal year, April to August, inclusive, immigration into Canada totalled 180,330, an increase of 74,748, or 71 per cent., as compared with the corresponding five months of last year. This rate of increase has been steadily maintained all year, and even during the present month new arrivals are surprisingly large. For the last fiscal year the total immigration was 208,794, and according to present indications the total for the current fiscal year will be between 330,000 and 350,000. Reports of Canadian immigration agents in Europe and in the United States are very optimistic as to the prospects for a very large influx of immigrants next year. The department expects that the figures for the coming fiscal year will show a total immigration of at least half a million.

NOVA SCOTIA CROPS.

The Yield of Fruit Alone Has Been a Failure.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: The Nova Scotia Government crop report was issued on Friday. The department says that with the exception of fruit, which has been a signal failure, crops have been good, and the year has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the agriculture of the province. The hay crop is 25 per cent. greater than last year, and the oat yield shows a similar increase over the year before, while wheat and barley are 20 per cent. greater. Instead of a crop of 800,000 barrels there will be only 225,000 barrels of apples available this year for home and foreign consumption.

DISASTER IN A COAL MINE

Twenty Dead, Eighteen Rescued, Near Fernie, B.C.

A despatch from Fernie, B. C., says: Forty-five miners were entombed on Friday about 8 o'clock in the Bellevue collieries, situated a short distance from Frank, Alberta. Of these eighteen have been rescued alive; twenty dead bodies were recovered. Of the remaining seven in the gas-crammed pits, four are believed to be alive. These four are in the upper workings, which they succeeded in walling off, to prevent the spread of the gas. The other three may be alive, but the supposition is that they are dead. By midnight the mine was sufficiently cleared of smoke so that the workmen could enter to rescue their friends. Appeals for help were sent to Fernie, where the Provincial Government of British Columbia have recently installed a splendid rescue apparatus. A special train was immediately made up by Mr. Uren, superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Two bodies were first found by the rescue party. Then ten men, alive, but some of them in fearful shape, were found at about the same time that two more bodies were recovered. The ten reported that others were still living, and the searchers penetrated further into the workings, where eight more were found in the early hours of the morning.

THE FINANCES OF CANADA

Expenditures and Receipts for Eight Months of the Current Fiscal Year

A despatch from Ottawa says: The financial statement of the Dominion for the first eight months of the current fiscal year shows a total revenue of $75,875,446, an increase of $11,218,937, or nearly eighteen per cent., as compared with the corresponding period of last year. For November alone the increase was $1,312,127. Expenditure on consolidated fund account for the eight months was $47,638,- $46, an increase of nearly $5,000,000. The revenue for the eight months was a little over $28,000,000 in excess of the expenditure on consolidated fund account. Capital expenditure for the eight months was $19,123,941, or a million and a half less than the capital expenditure for the corresponding period last year. The total net debt on November 30 was $327,764,621, a decrease during the month of $533,356

AN ANCIENT CUSTOM.

Wassailing of Apple Trees Still Observed in Parts of England.

What is the wassailing of apple trees?

This is an old custom, fast dying out, but still observed in parts of Somerset and Devon. At Wootton-Basset, near Minehead, the ceremony takes place on old Twelfth eve. All assemble at the farmhouse and after a hearty meal form a procession to the nearest orchard, the master in front with a light and men with old guns, blunderbusses and anything that makes a noise in the rear. Plenty of cider is taken and some pieces of toast.

When the orchard is reached a ring is formed, and the master, in the center, seizes a branch and sings a verse beginning "Oh, apple tree, I wassail thee, in hopes that thou wilt blow." Then all shout in chorus:

Hatfuls, capfuls, three bushel bagfuls,
Barn floorfuls, tullet holefuls
And a little heap under the stairs.

Then follow cheers, drinking of healths, shouts of "Now, Tom Pod, we wassail thee!" and the placing of the pieces of toast, soaked in cider, among the branches for the robins.—London Answers.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES.

Maritime Magistrate's Case.

Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N. A., a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a Deacon of the Baptist Church in Burwick, says: "I have used Zam-Buk for piles and found it a splendid remedy. It cured me."

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I had a fever, which left me with piles. I started to use Zam-Buk, and found it gave me relief, so I continued with it. After using three or four boxes, it effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful imitations and substitutes. See the registered name "Zam-Buk" on every package before buying.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.;

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead, price $300 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $300 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Don't Be Bald

Nearly Anyone May Secure a Splendid Growth of Hair.

We have a remedy that has a record of growing hair and curing baldness in 98 out of every 100 cases where used according to directions for a reasonable length of time. That may seem like a strong statement—it is, and we mean it to be, and no one should doubt it until they have put our claims to an actual test.

We are so certain Rexall "93" Hair
Tonic will cure dandruff, prevent baldness, stimulate the scalp and hair roots, stop falling hair and grow new hair, that we personally give our positive guarantee to refund every penny paid us for it in every instance where it does not give entire satisfaction to the user.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is as pleasant to use as clear spring water. It is delightfully perfumed, and does not grease or gum the hair. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. With our guarantee back of it, you certainly take no risk.
Sold only at our store—The Rexall store. T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

HIS GOOD FORTUNE.

When He Had to Work He Started a Dainty Rolling Mill.

I was just entering upon my thirty-fourth year when, owing to the failure of my wife's father, I found myself obliged to make a living.

I had often wondered where all the steel rails came from, and now I determined to go into the business of supplying them to railroad companies.
Having learned through careful inquiry that nearly all of them were made in rolling mills, I persuaded the owner of a bankrupt iron foundry to convert it into a rolling mill. Then I went to a good reliable machinery man on the next block and told him to send me some of the very best rolling mill machinery that he had in his store.

Meanwhile my noble wife had not been idle, and by the time I was ready to begin operations she had induced several of the most brilliant women in society to agree to buy all their steel rails of us. Touched by her unselfish devotion, I clasped her in my arms, while the tears coursed down my cheeks.

Then I called on a railroad president, told him that I desired to become self supporting and asked him to buy some of my rails. He told me to deliver a basketful to his place of business every Saturday night.

Greatly elated over my prospects, I called together a number of workmen whom I found idle on the streets and directed them to make some nice steel rails without delay and take them around to the kind railroad president.

Rejoicing at the prospect of steady employment, the workmen hastened to obey, and the rails that they made under my direction proved so durable

Styles in Teeth.

Pearly teeth are not the fashion everywhere. One firm of artificial teeth manufacturers have to keep in stock molars of every shade of color from white to black. There is a steady demand for black teeth for Siam, Java, Batavia and Burma, where the natives chew the betel nut, which blackens the teeth. For Persia the teeth must be absolutely milk white. Recently an order was received from Bhavnagar, in India, for some bright red and blue artificial teeth.
Smokers' teeth are regularly supplied to dentists in shades to match those which have been discolored by nicot-tine.—Argonaut.

A Fish Out of Water.

Many people think that fish when taken out of the water die because air has a fatal effect on them. The real reason, however, is that their delicate gill filaments or membranes become dry and stick together, so that no air can pass between them. Thus they lose the power to imbibe necessary oxygen, and the circulation of their blood stops. The painful gasping of a fish out of water is nature's effort to free the passage through the filaments.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills
Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—the kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

ou don't feel just right, let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist to cure your indisposition and prevent worse ailments.

A third of a century ago Psychine made remarkable cures.

To-day it is making remarkable cures.

In the interim, millions of bottles of Psychine have been sold.

Hundreds of thousands of people made well and kept well.

Why?

Because Psychine is largely made up of those herbs that scientists now know increase and strengthen the white corpuscles, the phagocytes.

That's why we have received hundreds of thousands of unsolicited testimonials, that's why we can afford to buy and give away hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine, that's why Psychine benefits these diseases:

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy. You could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. Believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

The Porcupine.

Mother Nature surely must have set out to make "something different" the day she invented the porcupine. Here was an animal with a pathetically mild disposition, without cunning or courage and almost as slow and clumsy as a turtle. It would have been absurd to give him weapons of defense; he would never have the energy to attack anything, so he was given a coat of mail in which he might walk abroad among his enemies and yet be as safe as though he were behind a wall of steel. His upper parts, from his nose to the tip of his thick, muscular tail, are covered with a mass of sharp pointed quills intermixed with coarse hair. Each quill is provided with a number of minute barbs pointing backward, so that when it is once inserted in the flesh of any animal the mere movement of the muscles will cause it to work deeper and deeper.—Suburban Life.

Her Artistic Instinct.

The girl was a dainty thing in pink, evidently a stranger in Boston. The fellow had Harvard written all over him. They were standing in the delivery room of the public library, and he was explaining to her the decorations by Edwin Abbey which illustrate the legend of the Holy Grail. As he talked he glanced occasionally at his fair listener and seemed pleased to find her apparently lost in rapture. Finally, when his stock of knowledge was exhausted, he exclaimed:
 "Why, I never before knew that you were so interested in art!"
 For a moment longer she continued to gaze at the painting; then, with a tremulous sigh, she turned to him with:
 "I have been wondering how many places it would make if cut up into one of those picture puzzles."—Harper's Magazine.

CURE DISEASES OF MEN

PATIENTS TREATED THROUGHOUT CANADA FOR 20 YEARS

DR. KENNEDY, MEDICAL DIRECTOR OF DRs. K. & K.

Dr. K. & K. are favorably known throughout Canada where they have done business for over 20 years. Thousands of patients have been treated and cured by their great skill and through the virtue of their New Method Treatment. When you treat with them you know you are dealing with responsible physicians as they own and occupy their own office building in Detroit, valued at $100,000. When they decide your case is curable, all your worry is removed for you know they will not deceive you. They guarantee to cure all curable cases. No matter how many doctors have failed to benefit you; no matter how much money you have spent in vain; no matter how discouraged you may be, don't give up in despair until you get a free opinion from these master specialists. If you are at present within the clutches of any secret habit which is sapping your life by degrees; if you are suffering from the results of past indiscretions; if your blood has been tainted from any private disease and you dare not marry; if you are married and live in dread of symptoms breaking out and exposing your past; if you are suffering as the result of a mispent life—Dr. K. & K. are your Refuge. Lay your case before them confidentially and they will tell you honestly if you are curable.

Does Local Option do the Work ?

What a Toronto Newspaper Reporter heard in Owen Sound—

1. That retired farmers were going into the blind pig business because there was so much easy money in it.
2. That a factory hand, who had gone into the blind pig business, had made four hundred dollars in a month, selling whiskey to his fellow workmen.
3. That employers of labor had had more trouble with their men since local option went into force than they had in fifteen years before.
4. That there is a system of signals, lights and bells, to warn the illegal vendor of the approach of the police. Also that there is a recognized vocabulary for the contraband.
5. That debts are thirty per cent. harder to collect under local option than they were before, as the records of the division court show.
6. That crime has increased thirty-three and a third per cent. as the police records show.

Local option is class legislation. No community would consent to be ruled entirely by any one religious denomination. Why then should it be obliged to submit to the opinions and restrictions of the total abstainer.

Liberty of Conscience and Liberty of Conduct should go hand in hand.

VOTE AGAINST LOCAL OPTION, IT WILL NOT SUIT YOU.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Five Boxes Of "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, DEC. 15th, 1909.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year, and my right arm was swollen and the pain was fearful. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful, and I could hardly move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians but their medicine did me no good, and I tried numerous other remedies but received no benefit. I was simply a helpless cripple and suffered from Rheumatism all during last winter.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try this remedy. After I had taken one box, I was much better and the pain less, and I continued the treatment with good hopes. When I had taken three boxes, I was so well that I could use my arm again and the pain was practically gone. After I had taken five boxes, I was entirely well again—no pain—no suffering—and now I am as WELL as I ever was.

The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me of my sufferings.

For the sake of others who may suffer from this terrible disease, Rheumatism, I give you permission to publish this statement."

Mrs. LIZZIE BAXTER.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy that actually cures Rheumatism, and Sciatica because "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that actually prevents Uric Acid being formed in any quantity in the body. If there is no excess of uric acid in the blood, there can be no Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" keeps the stomach clean—the liver active—the bowels regular—the kidney strong and the skin healthy. These are the organs that rid the body of all waste. When "Fruit-a-tives" so regulates the system that all waste is eliminated, then there can be no waste or "urea" to be changed into uric acid. Thus, there can be no uric acid in the blood, to inflame nerves and cause the pain which we know by the names of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" will cure every trace of Rheumatism, Pain In The Back, Swollen Hands and Feet, and other troubles due to the blood being poisoned by uric acid.

If you are subject to Rheumatism, cure yourself now with "Fruit-a-tives" and be free of pain this winter.

Oysters grow only during summer, and especially during long, warm summers at that, and are scarcely big enough for the mouth before the third year. It is easy after looking over a bunch of shells to tell how old an oyster is. A summer hump and the winter sink come across the shell every year, but after the seventh or tenth year full growth comes; then by looking at the sinks between the humps it is hard to tell anything more about Miss Oyster's age. Oysters easily live to be twenty years old.—New York Press.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever—nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CO-OPERATION, the corner-stone on which The Peerless Way rests, is the factor that is building up the poultry industry in Canada,—is the factor that has made possible the big profits in this business. This book, "When Poultry Pays,"—the book that goes to you FREE on request—is a volume you cannot afford to be without if you are even the least bit interested in better-strain fowl, more eggs, higher prices, assured markets; in short, in

The Poultry Method That Ensures Success In The Canadian Climate.

The Peerless Way is more than merely a system for raising poultry—it is a system that is complete from the moment the chick is hatched until either the fowl or its eggs has put profits into your pocket. The Peerless Way is both a poultry-raising system and a co-operative marketing method.

The Peerless Way will show you how to "make good" in hatching and brooding—in rearing your chicks—in feeding them right—and bringing them most quickly to market size or to egg production—to the profit stage. The Peerless Way will find you a market at highest prices—and for spot cash! That is an important part of the service. The Peerless Way guarantees absolutely to put you in touch with buyers who will take off your hands every cent's worth of your entire output at topmarch figures.

Offers You Co-Operation In Breeding, Rearing and Marketing In The Most Productive Branch Of Agriculture.

Canada, with all her natural advantages and her special adaptability to the breeding of an extremely hardy strain of poultry, needs only to be awakened to take her proper place as the greatest poultry country in the world. But that awakening must come through YOU—each individual farmer, poultryman—each Canadian—must realize what a veritable gold-mine this field has to offer if it is only worked and worked RIGHT! And The Peerless Way is forcing this awakening—has already awakened 15,000 Canadian poultrymen to the possibilities of the industry—and CAN show you. The Peerless Way will show you the unequalled opportunity for extension that exists in the poultry business—how its numerous and varied branches are capable of rhythmic combination and union; it will illustrate how the business may be adapted to your locality, either as an individual business of considerable size or as a work secondary to some other, either upon enlarged or confined limits.

Get Into An Under-Supplied Market With Rising Prices

When you stop to consider how the prices of both poultry and eggs have doubled within the last ten years, you can readily see that the market is away under-supplied—that the business must be a tremendous money-maker for someone. Why should not you be among those who are taking the easy profits? You can be as successful as any poultry-raiser in Canada if you will only let The Peerless Way show you how—if you will only follow out our methods, and devote just a little time and more or less common-sense to the work. Poultry-raising is a long way from being over-done. One user of The Peerless Way sold nearly a quarter of a million fowl last year—over twenty-five carloads. And he started just as YOU can start—with practically no investment at all. Do not put this off—only costs a two-cent stamp to know more for the book and the proof. Put the burden of proof up to us and make us prove our case for you. Merely send the coupon.

FRUITS FOR CHRISTMAS

Harvest of the World Pours Into England

One of the pleasantest associations of Christmas is the fruit. Besides the sugary, crystalized fruit (of which perhaps the less said the better), there is always, at least in the upper and middle-class families, the fresh fruit and the dried fruits and nuts and dessert, to say nothing of the dried fruit in the Christmas pudding and mince pies.

And from the humanitarian point of view the fruit is the least objectionable part of our food; the taint of the shambles is not about it; it is in harmony with the highest ethical ideas of Christmas Day. And perhaps from the health point of view the use of fresh fruit does something to counteract the excess of other foods, and to keep the body less clogged than it would otherwise be. From the aesthetic point of view nothing could be more admirable than the array of fruit—the oranges, apples, bananas, raisins, figs, dates, and, in the plum pudding, the sultanas and currants and so on.

The orange itself has always been invested with romance perhaps because the Crusaders, who first met with the fruit in the Levant, fostered the theory that it was the golden apple of Hesperides. "Psychic" people set the orange high among fruits. Then there is the date, which was the object of peculiar veneration in prehistoric time; it was a symbol of helpfulness, and we need not wonder at this when we consider its value to the Egyptians. The fig, besides its well-known health properties, carries us back to the days of Greece when athletes used figs as an important part of their dietary.

It is very pleasant, from whatever point of view one looks at it, to find fruit taking a more important place than ever before in Christmas fare. This change has been steady during recent years. For instance, a quarter of a century ago we used not to have bananas at Christmas. Our oranges came (and very sour they were as a rule) from Spain and Italy, our prunes from France, our figs and dates from a few ports in Asia Minor and northern Africa, while our apples and pears were almost exclusively home products.

Think also of the prices twenty-five years ago. Boxes of three hundred St. Michael oranges cost from sixteen to eighteen shillings a box wholesale in Covent Garden, Egyptian dates fifty shillings a hundredweight, apples twelve shillings a bushel, and pears from threepence to ninepence each.

To-day the above mentioned small range of producing countries would not nearly supply the enormous demand. We draw now on the whole globe, and still we need more than we can get at a moderate price. Take apples as an example. In 1870 two-thirds of the the sun, and the sulphur tends to destroy the flavor.

The finest sultanas are the Greek. The commoner kinds are highly sulphured, so as to produce a clean color. In Asia Minor sultanas are still brought into port on the backs of camels, and are re-packed before shipment.

The best currants are the small black, rich and fleshy kind; the ordinary provincials which are commonly used are far inferior. There has been an enormous growth recently in the currant trade with Greece; it has been advertised freely. Let us hope that Australia will experiment with currant growing and reap some of the harvest of this advertising.

Of prunes the French no longer hold the decidedly best kinds. California and Oregon compete with France, the Oregon variety being stoneless.

The best Canadian and California apples begin to arrive early in November, and are actually at their best about Christmas time. The Newtown pippins and the Northern Spy (a variety like the Baldwin, and excellent for table and cooking) are among the best.

Pears come from the same districts, but, of course, are more perishable.

Oranges are sweeter and riper now than they used to be at Christmas. Valencia oranges are the finest kind to use at Christmas—Valencia oranges and Messina melons.

As to dates, Tafiets come first (from Algeria) and Egyptian second. The common date, the Tunis or honey date, is dressed with syrup before it is pressed; hence its sweetness.

Candied peels are brought over in brine pickle; then the salt is washed out, and the peel cooked and crystalized in a sugar solution.

Bananas are not naturally at their best at Christmas time; they are artificially ripened, and, therefore, dearer. Still, they are a most popular fruit, and are indispensable in fruit salads, etc.

Turning to the dried fruits—apricots, apples, peaches, etc.—we find that they are all of fairly modern growth and chiefly from America, which does the best trade. The same applies to bottled fruits. California is now bottling fruits in distilled water. There is no doubt that the bottled fruits have come to stay.

The origin of the canning of fruit is interesting. Years ago, when the excavations of Pompeii were beginning, some Americans discovered many jars of preserved figs in what had been the pantry of a house. One of these jars was opened, and the figs were found to be fresh and good. The hint was taken, and the very next year fruit canning was introduced into the United States. An interesting

CHRISTMAS GIVING

Christmas is a symbol. Christmas giving is symbolic, says Appleton's for December. The importance of the symbol is the importance of that for which it stands. Christmas commemorates the birth of Christ, the birth of Christianity. It symbolizes brotherly love, helpfulness to one another, unselfish giving. Of symbols we stand in peculiar need. We are a practical people, we are a commercial people, we have a country of vast material wealth. It is hard to be true to our ideals. Without symbols it would be impossible.

We are men and not machines. We have hearts and imaginations as well as brains and bodies. Unless we feed our brains and bodies they starve. Unless we feed our hearts and imaginations they starve. There are in the Bible no truer words than "Man cannot live by bread alone."

All things good can be put to bad use. Some people so use Christmas. A certain woman said to her family shortly before Christmas, "I am afraid you will find my presents very mean this year. The fact is, I had to spend so much on people I didn't want to give to that I had very little left to spend on you. Some odious women whom I never thought of sent me presents last Christmas. I know they just wanted to make me uncomfortable. I got ahead of them this year! I sent them more expensive things than they will ever dream of sending me. Besides, I have several extra presents as a safeguard. If people I haven't thought of send me things, I'll just mail these right off to them." Was it blessed to give or receive such presents? The presents for the unknown people suggest the Athenian's temples to the unknown god. The suggestion is pertinent. This woman's giving was pagan—not Christian. She was worse than the man who would have no Christmas nonsense.

A young girl with several million dollars in her own right was showing her Christmas presents to her friends. They were magnificent. They represented thousands of dollars. The friends gasped with admiration. To their amazement they found that whatever else they admired, they must admire a funny little old-fashioned dolly. It was of cheap materials and hideous colors. The young girl appeared to care more for it than for all her costly presents. Why? It had been made for her by a little old woman who eked out her threadbare existence by selling flagroot. It's not the gift, it's the giver. It's not the act, it's the spirit back of the act. You can't buy Christmas any more than you can buy a home. You can buy a house, but you can't buy a home. You can buy Christmas presents and Christmas trees, but you can't buy Christmas.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

When World Weary Lives are Filled With Gayety and Hope.

TELLING SANTA CLAUS WHAT

WAYS OF USING CHICKEN GIBLETS

Preliminary preparation of giblets—Drop the livers and hearts into water; wash, then spit the hearts thoroughly to cleanse them from blood; change the water if necessary. If the gizzards are intact, pare off the iridescent tough membrane at either end, then cut out the lump of firm flesh, cutting downward until the knife touches the central pouch. Add the cut pieces to the livers and hearts and discard the remainder of the gizzards. Drain, place in a small saucepan with one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and sufficient boiling water to cover and simmer gently. The livers, being tender, will be done first; skim them out and continue the cooking until the remaining meat is very tender. Put all together in a bowl and set aside in a cool place until needed.

To-day the above mentioned small range of producing countries would not nearly supply the enormous demand. We draw now on the whole globe, and still we need more than we can get at a moderate price. Take apples as an example. In 1870 two-thirds of the entire stock of apples in the country were exhausted at Christmas. At the present the supply of marketable English apples, except for a few varieties used at dessert, is exhausted long before, and at Christmas we are drawing on American and Canadian supplies. In 1870 we had none of these, only Normandy pippins, which sold wholesale in Covent Garden at ninety-five shillings a hundred-weight at Christmas time. Again, as late as 1886 bananas did not find their way into England regularly; they only reached here irregularly from time to time. Now, although their best time is July and August, they are to be found also at Christmas. They are among the cheapest and most popular of all Christmas fruits. Some of the best prunes come now from California and Oregon. Trade with these countries is comparatively recent. California also gives us excellent bottled fruits.

The first consignment of Jamaica oranges, which form an important part of the present trade of Jamaica, was in 1867. The first consignment of Jaffa oranges to England was as recent as 1886; these had to be transhipped at Alexandria, since no English steamer was then running direct. To-day oranges are also grown largely in Florida and elsewhere.

It was the Indian and Colonial Exhibition of 1886 that first drew colonial fruits to England in any quantity. Australian apples reached us then for the first time; but Tasmania, the great apple and pear country, was I believe, not represented at all. In 1847 some apples had reached Vienna for the International Exhibition from New South Wales; they were packed in cotton wool, and this was thought a wonderfully clever idea. In 1886 Messrs Scrutton & Sons began to bring fresh fruit from the West Indies in cool chambers, specially fitted up for the purpose, and I believe the Elder Line has recently put on special ships for the banana trade.

The ordinary grocer will perhaps be unable to tell you that the best raisins are the Malaga, very dark and thin skinned muscats, beautifully sweet. These raisins have to be dried in the sun, artificial drying experiments having proved a comparative failure. Probably in part because of the abundance of sunlight, Australia and the Cape will soon become important countries for raisins. The fruit is prepared for packing. It is dipped for an instant in boiling water for the sake of sterilization, and then it is dried on straw in the sun, when it shrinks to a half or a third of its original bulk. The ordinary raisin of the grocer is a cheaper kind, larger, redder and coarser.

Figs begin to come in in November. The figs from Turkey are the best. The unpressed are better than the pressed; they are more fleshy and juicy. Two harvests are gathered each year in the Levant. We get the second or Summer crop. The commoner varieties are sulphured before they are dried in we were beginning, some Americans discovered many jars of preserved figs in what had been the pantry of a house. One of these jars was opened, and the figs were found to be fresh and good. The hint was taken, and the very next year fruit canning was introduced into the United States. An interesting account is given in Food, for September 15, 1884.

A word may be said about the food value of these fruits, so that we may consider how far they are likely to take the place of other Christmas foods; certainly the other Christmas foods are not likely to take their place! First and foremost come the nuts, which, as a general rule, can take the place of any flesh foods, especially if they are properly prepared. Already many families use Brazil nuts or pine kernels or other nuts freely in the Christmas plum pudding. Nuts are the only fruits that have any considerable body-building value.

In an entirely different class come the dried fruits, which are comparatively poor in body building elements or proteid, but are rich in a kind of sugar, which is generally very easily digested. Figs, dates, prunes, and sultanas have a reputation as aperients; they were and are an important part of the ancient dietary of many peoples.

The fresh fruits, excepting the banana, which stands as distinct from them, have scarcely any body building value; their chief value is because of their pure water and natural "salts." Different fruits have different effects, some being useful for one purpose, others for another; but among the most honored of all fruits for their health value are apples, grapes and melons. Almost every healing virtue has been attributed to the apple—for instance, the power of dissolving uric acid; and the grape cure is familiar, by name at least, to everyone. Lemon is well known to be a cooling fruit and a preventive of scurvy. It would be easy to devote page after page to the subjects of the curative effects of various fruits.

Here, however, it must suffice to ask, what will become of the orthodox roast beef and turkey and sausages a century hence? Will they still generally survive, or will they have given place to a non-flesh dinner, not necessarily of fruits only, for that would be unwise, but with fruits as part of the healthy elements in the meal, and also because of old associations with Christmas time? For when we see side by side at Christmas time, in the poorer districts or in the richer districts, the stalls or shops of the butchers, poulterers and fishmongers on the one hand, and of the fruiterers and green grocers on the other hand, we cannot hesitate for a moment as to which is the pleasanter sight, which is the one that we should rather perpetuate, which is the one which we should prefer that our children should associate with the idea of Christmas.

Date Creams.—Take a half pound of dates, remove the stones, put in a piece of the cream, roll in sugar and dry.

Chopped nuts may be kneaded in the cream and make delicious candy.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

When World Weary Lives are Filled With Gayety and Hope.

Once in a rare while a genius will recover childhood through imagination and bring back again the spirit of its life into consciousness. Then we see the play, or we read the book, with a grateful joy almost painful in its intensity. We turn towards the author with a love that has a little of the divine in its trust and responsiveness. He knows us as well as we know ourselves. He has looked past the self-consciousness, the sophistications, the jealousies and the selfishness and has shown us to ourselves as we really are in spirit and as we struggle to express ourselves. He succeeds where we fail.

This is the spirit of Christmas. We are filled with freshness, gayety and hope. The world is filled with new and interesting things. The day is long, not from tediousness, but from variety, and one day is not the repetition of another. We answer back to the general goodwill with a joy that is all the deeper because there is no thought in it and no reflection. The spontaneous exercise of our faculties is in itself happiness. We laugh with the crowd and sympathize with the unhappy. We give to those who cannot help each other, with no thought of obligation on our side. It is a privilege to give and receive. We are not afraid of anything, for our real, unspoiled selves are living the Law of Love.

ALPHONSO'S CHRISTMAS.

In Spain Christmas comes to court with all the gorgeous rites and ceremonies of the Catholic Church and lasts for twelve days. It opens with the midnight mass on Christmas Eve, when the king, his mother and his sister, accompanied by the grandees of the court, magnificently attired march in state to the royal chapel of the palace. It is a singular fact that King Alphonso attended the great midnight mass only after he had attained his majority. On Christmas morning the king and court again attend mass in state, after which the day is spent in merrymaking.

MAN IN THE MOON.

Russian folk-lore tells that the man in the moon was one who was seeking the isle in which there was no death. At last, after travelling far, he found the longed-for haven and took up his abode in the moon. After a hundred years had passed, death called for him one Christmas Eve, and a fierce struggle ensued with the moon, who was victorious; and so the man stayed where he was.

STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

This old, sobbing world of ours is one year older than it was when the last Christmas carol was chanted. It has had another twelve months of experiments and experiences, of advancement on many lines of human research, scientific discovery and acquisition. But it has not outgrown Jesus Christ. For Him it has discovered no substitute. The Star of Bethlehem is the only star that never sets.—Theodore Cuyler.

find. Have at hand a number of skewers. On each string alternately the cut bacon and giblets, having a piece of bacon at the beginning and end of each skewer. Brush them with melted butter, arrange on a fine wire broiler, dust with salt and pepper and brown over a hot fire; or dip each skewer when filled into slightly beaten egg and roll in fine bread crumbs, then immerse in smoking hot fat and fry golden brown.

Giblets in timbale cases.—Prepare the timbale cases. Cut the giblets quite fine (they may be put through the chopper) and measure them. For a cupful prepare a thick brown sauce, browning well together one tablespoonful of butter and one heaping tablespoonful of flour; stir in three-quarters of a cupful of the giblet liquor and when smooth and thick season highly with salt, pepper, ten drops each of onion juice and Worcestershire. Add the chopped giblets and simmer for five minutes, then fill the cases and send at once to the table.

Giblets a la supreme (in the chafin dish).—Cut into inch pieces sufficient previously cooked giblets to measure one cupful. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in the dish, add the giblets, cover and stir occasionally until they begin to color. Add one tablespoonful of wine, stir until colored, then add one cupful of the liquor and stir until thickened. Season with salt and pepper, boil hard for two minutes, add one dozen olives cut into strips and one tablespoonful of sherry and cook for a moment longer.

Giblet soup.—For this recipe take the giblets after they are thoroughly cleaned and cut them into half-inch pieces. Put them into a kettle with three pints of cold water, heat slowly and simmer very gently for an hour. Add one small white onion stuck with two cloves, one stalk of celery, one-quarter of a bay leaf, a spring of parsley and one of thyme, one scant teaspoonful of salt and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and simmer for one hour and a half longer. Remove the seasonings. In a clean saucepan brown together one-half of a teaspoonful of butter and one tablespoonful of flour. Add one pint of good stock, stir until smooth, then add this to the soup. Add more seasoning if necessary, with one teaspoonful of lemon juice and take from the fire.

Giblet pie.—Put the cleaned raw giblets into a saucepan; if you have them, add the necks and pinions; if not, substitute one pound of round beef. Add one small onion stuck with four cloves, one-half of a medium sized carrot cut into half-inch dice, one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and sufficient boiling water to cover and simmer gently until the meat is very tender. Boil four eggs separately for half an hour. When the meat is done remove the onion, add more seasoning if necessary and put aside until cold, then cut the meat into inch pieces. Shell and quarter the eggs. Line a deep dish with good paste. Fill with the meat, adding pieces of egg as the dish is filled. If the quantity of meat is scant it may be helped by the addition of parboiled potatoes cut in pieces. Cover with pastry, make a hole in the center, pour in about a third of the gravy. Brush with milk or beaten egg and bake in a moderate oven for an hour and a quarter. When nearly done, add another third of the gravy, heat the remainder and pour

THE MISTLETOE AND ITS MEANING

The use of the mistletoe at Christmas time is one of the links connecting the Christmas festival to one that was celebrated by our pagan ancestors. The earliest religion that can be attributed to the Aryans was simple nature worship, with the sun as chief deity. Among the Greeks and Romans, this nature worship had in historic times evolved into the pantheon of Jupiter and his fellow divinities, but traces of the original system can be distinguished.

In Gaul and adjacent lands inhabited by the Celts, the old religion retained its pristine characteristics, and under the name of Druidism received the study of Tacitus, Pliny and other classical writers. Enough has been recorded by them to enable us, with the aid of the customs of the modern European peasantry, to reconstruct the ancient system.

The two principal festivities of the Druids were in June and December. The first occurred some days after the longest day of the year, when it could be noticed that the sun had ceased his upward climb in the heavens; the second followed the shortest day, when the people saw the divine luminary had once more started in his march to the zenith to bring back the Spring. The first festival was a period of fear, the second of rejoicing. And they have both survived; one in St. John's Day (midsummer), the other in Christmas.

In both these festivals a principal rite was the cutting of the mistletoe. Among the Aryans, the oak was always an object of worship, either because they came originally from a locality where the oak was at one time far more plentiful in Europe than it is today.

Now among these primitive Aryans, the only way to obtain fire was by rubbing two sticks together. As this practice was started where only oak trees grew it came to be thought that only such wood was suitable for the act. Even to this day in the various nooks and corners of Europe, where annual fires are lighted, such as on Hallowe'en, the fire is usually brought out by rubbing oak wood. Our primitive ancestors, therefore, conceived the fire as being inherent in the oak, like a miraculous kind of sap, and consequently, they found a mystical connection between oak and sun, the divine fire.

Therefore, when they noticed this strange plant growing out of the oak, belonging neither to earth nor sky, and deriving its sustenance from no visible source, they concluded that here was the essence of the oak. Hence, it was regarded as sacred and gifted with strange powers. When cut, it was not allowed to touch the desecrating earth, but white cloths were spread beneath it.

Cutting the mistletoe was also probably the signal for festivities that culminated in an unlicensed saturnalia, as is suggested by a custom that formerly prevailed in York on Christmas Eve, when the high altar was laden with mistle-

THE CHRISTMAS GIFT

In a Real Sense Every Christmas is a New Birth of the Christ
Into this World

"And he shall save his people from their sins."—Matthew i., 21.

He would be a foolish man, indeed, who should worry over the question whether the first Christmas was a historical fact, so as to lose sight of this greater wonder of the fact that, in the name of that far off day and the memory of that strange babe, gentleness, love, and kindness are enthroned in our humanity today.

Wonderful as were the stories told of that epochal night, when shepherd's songs heralded a new era, not less wonderful is this: That here today, for at least a brief while, we all place ourselves under the dominance of a new spirit and endeavor to realize that of which the angels sang, "Peace on earth and good will to men."

There are no songs to greet our waiting cars; no star shines before us on our way; the magi we do not have, but the real miracle of Christmas is in our midst. It is vastly more wonderful that all men should submit to love's law than that a few men should be notified in any supernatural manner that its reign had begun.

We celebrate this day and season, not by childish worship of its traditional wonders, but by willingness to catch its inner meaning and essential spirit, and by efforts to practice and perpetuate these. Vain is all our wishing that we might have heard the songs on that midnight air unless we are working to bring about that era of peace and good will of which they sang.

When you get back off the incidents of the stories of the first Christmas, one infinitely deep and potential thing stands out: The story records the gift of a life to the world and sets forever a new standard which declares that the life is most divine which most freely gives itself for men.

It makes comparatively little difference whether we come to precise agreement on the historical accounts of the beginning of that wondrous life, so long as we are agreed that the best, the noblest, the fairest thing in all life is love, the kind of love that then manifested itself in service and fellowship for men.

If the throbbing of love for others is never stirred in us until the tide of the Christmas season sweeps all about us and warms up even the coldest hearts, we cannot know what this season really means. We need not one day when we express all the altruism we possess; we need that spirit of infinite kindness that shall be a spring of love welling up the year around.

His birthday is a meaningless holiday if the spirit of the Christ be not a permanent guest in our hearts, and empty is this season that we know by his name if his likeness reveal not itself in us through our thoughtfulness of the needy, our care for the careworn, and through steady, earnest, sacrificing endeavor to bring peace and good will to prevail everywhere.

Of all times this is the most desolate to those whose hearts have become congealed to love, to those who have ceased to feel the thrill of the joy of self-giving. It is saddest of all and most disappointing to those who are thinking only of gaining, of what others may give to them. Selfishness turns a garden into a desert, but love has turned the desert of a world given over to selfishness into a garden of paradise.

The thing that has redeemed this earth has been that of which the Christmas season reminds us, the spirit of loving self-giving. The pages of history glow brighter with every passing year as the spirit grows, as more and more men discover the heavenly joy of service and sacrifice.

He who would be happy on this day must learn this way of happiness. There is no other way by which deep and lasting joy can reach the heart and remain there. The deep sin from which we all need salvation is the sin of selfishness. Redeemed from that we find the real richness and blessing of living.

What a wondrous change it would make in our world if just for one day, without reservations of any sort, we sought to live out toward all men the best instincts within us, if we followed the path of our best wishes for others and made our Christmas gift to the world just ourselves, and our sympathies.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

The Christmas tree had been growing in the deep green heart of the woods, listening to all the forest voices, croons and whirs and candies, and then the "Mission children had their turn, and sang Christmas songs and were so gay, and glad that the old Christmas tree sighed in every green twig for sympathy, and said to himself,

"This is the world."

"This is life!"

A Christmas Carol.

There was a star of light,
Mystical and holy,
Shone through the quiet night
O'er a stable lowly.
Sing praise to God on high!
And rejoice that He
Thus should beautify
Humble poverty.

A Merrie Christmas, gentlefolk!
And may your wealth and pride
Be mindful of the humble ones
This blessed Christmastide.

There was a Little Child,
Innocent and holy,
Born of the Virgin child
In that stable lowly.
Sing praise to God, who gave Unto you and me
Such Care our souls to save!
O! the Charity!

A Merrie Christmas, gentlefolk!
And may your wealth and pride
Be mindful of the humble ones

CHRISTMAS CHEER.

What the Various Nations Regard as Luxuries.

Every country apparently has its own ideas about what constitutes good cheer at Christmas. Foreigners are apt to regard the American fondness for cranberry sauce as very queer. Nor are they particularly keen as regards turkey. England continues to swear by her plum-puddings and roasted "joints." Who would have it otherwise!

The Frenchman's Christmas bill of fare is much more extensive and varied. The great national dish is the black-pudding, or boudin, of which every Frenchman makes a very hearty meal on Christmas Eve. Then there is a wonderful Strasburg pie, whose contents are truffles and slices of the livers of fattened geese; boars'-head jelly, plentifully stuffed with pistachios; oysters, lobsters and cray-fish, and last, but by no means least, delicious edible snails. The best come from Burgundy.

The Russian's chief Yuletide meal consists largely of two dishes—one wheat-porridge served with honey, and the other a curious compound of stewed pears and apples, oranges, grapes and cherries, sweetened with honey, and served cold. To this meal, which is washed down with liberal drafts of vodka, the Russian sits down with his family and servants. Before the meal is commenced he throws a spoonful of the porridge against the ceiling, the fortune of the coming year being determined by the quantity that sticks there.

The principle of Yuletide delicacy in Austria is fruchtbrod, made of raisins, currants, figs, and chopped dates, of which enormous quantities are eaten. Other cakes, made of poppy-seed or ground nuts, are also high favor; while the national meal, partaken of on Christmas Eve, is of soup, carp chopped and baked, boiled beef and vegetables, and Vienna pudding.

At Christmas time the Italian also revels in cakes of various kinds, sweet and indigestible, while the favorite Christmas Eve supper is one of eels, periwinkles and vermicelli.

The Germans, like most of our Continental friends, make the Christmas Eve supper the principal Yuletide feast; and at this meal the chief delicacies are carp cooked in beer and mohnpielen, a dish composed of white bread, almonds, raisins, and poppy stewed in milk. The German, too, like the Austrian and Italian, has a very sweet tooth, which he indulges regardless of consequences at this privileged season of the year. The most popular delicacy of this kind is the marzipan tart; but it has many rivals, by no means to be despised, in the honey cakes of Brunswick, the Dresden stollen, and the rich Nuremberg ginger cakes.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

The Christmas tree had been growing in the deep green heart of the woods, listening to all the forest voices, croons and whirs and whizzing noises, hums and tiny snaps and crackles, and all the low almost inarticulate sounds of nature; hearing the birds sing in the glad spring, seeing the flowers awake and the leaves uncurl, then, later, beholding the pageant of autumn, and at last the flutter and fall of the floating, flying flakes of the snow.

The Christmas tree knew the great silences of the wood. It loved the white winter when, for days together, few sounds were heard. It grew faster in those still, free days, just as our souls do when they have a chance, in solitude and seclusion.

But one day the Christmas tree found itself sharply and keenly cleft from the soil; one blow of a gleaming axe did the work, and so deft and clean was the cut that the Christmas tree felt no pang. Only the roots, left lonely in the soil, moaned and shivered and felt that their time was over, and that they never more would care for what was going on in the sweet, green world above them, where the sky was blue and the clouds sailed overhead, and birds lived and squirrels chattered. Poor, lonesome roots!

The Christmas tree went to market? And presently the Christmas tree was brought home.

Oh! what a lovely, fragrant home, with children in it, and a father and mother, and a jolly grandfather, and a beautiful gracious grandmother, and several merry aunts and gay young uncles. Everybody admired the tall finely branching tree, so strong, so spicy, so green, so alive with the full life of all outdoors.

The Christmas tree was proud to be so admired, as indeed, we, too! He stood with great grace and dignity where he was placed, and in his boughs the mother fastened a hundred tiny tapers which would be golden stars on Christmas Eve. Then the aunts strung wreaths of snowy popped corn in and out among the green, and so many presents were brought by everybody for everybody else, that the Christmas tree would have ached under the burden if he had not been very strong, indeed.

But he was strong and happy, and he liked the great parlor with so many pretty things in it, that he had never seen before, and people coming and going, and girls joining hands and dancing the length of the room for pure pleasure, and father and mother smiling and saying sweet words, for they were lovers always, this splendid father and mother, with these dear children to make their home like heaven.

"This is the world!" said the Christmas tree. "This is life!" and he listened to the waltz that Phebe played on the piano, and thought it sweeter than the sound of the brook in the forest.

Christmas Eve came and the tree was lighted, and the children and the grown people had their gifts, and it was the merriest evening in the year. Then, the very next day the Christmas tree was carried away to a big room in another street and hung with more gifts, sleds, and books, and dolls and tree signed in every green leaf to sympathy, and said to himself, "This is the world!" "This is life!"

THE CHRISTMAS STOCKING.

This Children's Custom Comes From Holland.

The habit of hanging up a stocking on Christmas Eve is by no means a universal one. Holland is practically the only country in Europe where children take this means of reminding St. Nicholas of his duty, and it is doubtless from Holland that both the stocking and "St. Nic." came to America. As for the other countries, they are contented with "something just as good."

In Belgium the children fill their shoes with beans and carrots on Christmas Eve, and set them in the chimney-place for the good saint's horse. In the morning they expect to find them filled with sweetmeats and fruit in return for their good behavior during the year.

Bohemian children listen anxiously on Christmas Eve for the chariot and white horses of the Christ-child, as he comes flying through the air with his Krippe full of presents; but the Italian children go gravely with their parents to churches and cathedrals, to see the Bambino, who presents them with their Christmas gifts.

The Spanish children hide their shoes or slippers in the bushes on Christmas Eve; and find them filled with fruit and sugar plums on Christmas morning.

In France the young people stand their shoes in a convenient place for the good Pre Noel to drop gifts in; sometimes, if the shoe of a bad boy is among them, he finds a whip in it in the morning. Very different is the feeling of the German child; he waits with feelings of mingled awe and pleasure for the coming of two important personages, the Christ-child and the "Knecht Kuppert." The latter person questions naughty children, and threatens them with punishment, till the Christ-child's intercession saves the culprit and wins its pardon. Then these two Christmas apparitions lay down their burden of gifts and depart.

The English child's Christmas has none of the delightful features, except the Christmas tree, lighted with tapers and hung with gifts; but he has the Christmas-box, and the evening is spent in all sorts of sports, such as snap-Dragon, blind-man's buff, and some more modern games.

In the Scandinavian countries the shoes of all the family are cleaned very carefully, and brightly polished on Christmas Eve, and set in a row before the hearthstone, to indicate that during the coming year everything will be peaceful and pleasant in the family. In the country places almost every family spreads a table with good cheer, and then the doors are left open so any one may come in as a guest. The person who wishes to give a present wraps it up in a quantity of straw and paper, and slyly flings it in at the door or window when no one is in sight.

If you have a tree mark a larva instead of labor of decorating.

THE SECRET OF HER POWER; Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER XII.—(Cont'd)

Gervase smiled, conscious of his past successes and willing to acknowledge them.

"But you see she does not sigh!" he murmurs, with a sense that the admission is not flattering to his own amour-propre.

"You have lost the power to make her sigh, do you mean?"

"I make no impression on her at all. I am utterly unable to imagine her feelings, her sentiments,—how much she would acknowledge, how much she would ignore."

"That is a confession of great helplessness! I should never have believed that you would be baffled by any woman, above all by a woman who once loved you."

"It is not easy to make a fire out of ashes."

"Not if the ashes are quite cold, certainly; but if a spark remains in them, the fire soon comes again."

He is silent; the apparent indifference of a person whom he believed to be living out her life in solitude, occupied only with his memory, annoys and mortifies him. He has never doubted his own power to write his name indelibly on the hearts of women.

"Perhaps she wishes to marry Blanford?" suggests Dorothy Usk.

"Pshaw!" says Lord Gervase.

"Why pshaw?" repeats his cousin, persistently. "He would not be a man to my taste, and he hates marriage, and he has a set of Hindoos at St. Hubert's Lea, which would require as much cleaning as the Augean stable; but I dare say she doesn't know anything about them, and he may be persuading her that he thinks marriage opens the doors of Paradise; men can so easily pretend that sort of thing! A great many men naves wanted to marry her, I believe, since she came back into the world after her seclusion. George declares that Blanford is quite serious."

"Preposterous!" replies Lord Gervase.

"Really, I don't see that," replies his judicious cousin. "A great many women have wanted to marry him, though one wonders why. Indeed, I have heard some of them declare that he is wholly irresistible when he chooses."

"With Hindoos, perhaps," says Gervase.

"With our own women," says his cousin. "Lady Mary Jardine died of a broken heart because he wouldn't look at her."

"Pray spare me the roll-call of his victims," says Lord Gervase, irritably: he is passionately jealous

ing of Xenia Sabaroff as he saw her first in the Salle des Palmiers in the Winter Palace,—a mere girl, a mere child, startled and made nervous by the admiration she excited and the homage she received, under the brutality of her husband, the raillery of her friends; but that time is long ago, very long, as the life of women counts, and Xenia Sabaroff is now perfect mistress of her own emotions, if emotions she ever feels. Gervase cannot for one moment tell whether the past is tenderly remembered by her, is utterly forgotten, or is only recalled to be touched and dismissed without regret. He is a vain man, but vanity has no power to reassure him here.

In the warm afternoon of the next day the children are in the school-room, supposed to be preparing their lessons for the morrow; but the German governess, who is alone as guardian of order in the temple of intellect, has fallen asleep, with flies buzzing about her blonde hair, and her blue spectacles pushed up on her forehead, and Dodo has taken advantage of the fact to go and lean out of one of the windows, while her sister draws a caricature of the sleeping virgin from Deutschland, and the Babe slips away from his books to a mechanical Punch, which, contraband in the school-room, is far dearer to him than his Gradus and rule of three.

Dodo, with her hands thrust among her abundant locks, lolls with half her body in the air, and, by twisting her neck almost to dislocation, manages to see round an ivy-grown buttress of the east wall, and to espy people who are getting on their horses at the south doors of the building.

"They are going out riding and I am shut up here!" she groans. "Oh, what a while it takes one to grow up!"

"Who are going to ride?" asks Lilie, too fascinated by her drawing to leave it.

"Lots of them," replies Dodo, who speaks four languages, and her own worst of all. "All of them, pretty nearly. Mamma's on Pepper, and Lady Waverley's got Bo-peep—she's always nervous, you know. I can't see very much, 'cause of the ivy. Oh, there's the princess on Satan—nobody else could ride Satan; Lord Blanford put her up, and now he's riding by her. They're gone now—and papa's stopping behind to do something to Bo-peep's girths." Whereat the dutiful Dodo laughs rudely, as she laughed coming home from church.

The Babe has a vast idea of his own resources in the way of speech and invention, and he has his mother's tendencies to interfere with other people's affairs, and is quite of an opinion that if he had the management of most things he should better them. He has broken his Parisian Punch in his endeavor to make it say more words than it could say, but this slight accident does not affect his own admiration and belief in his own powers, any more than to have brought a great and prosperous empire within measurable distance of civil war affects a statesman's conviction that he is the only person who can rule that empire. The Babe, like Mr. Gladstone, is in his own eyes infallible. Like the astute diplomatist he is, he waits for a good opportunity; he is always where the ladies are, and his sharp little wits have been preternaturally quickened in that atmosphere of what the French call "l'odeur feminine."

He has to wait some days for his occasion. The frank and friendly intercourse which existed at first between Blanford and Mme Sabaroff is altered; they are never alone, and the pleasant discussions on poets and poetry, on philosophers and follies, in the gardens in the forenoon are discontinued, neither could very well say why, but the presence of Gervase chills and oppresses both of them and keeps them apart. She has the burden of memory, he the burden of suspicion; and suspicion is a thing so hateful and intolerable to the nature of Blanford that it makes him miserable to feel himself guilty of it.

But one morning the Babe ceases her out-to-go with him to his garden—a floral republic, where a cabbage comes up cheek by jowl with a glloxinia, and plants are plucked up by the roots to see if they are growing aright. The Babe's system of horticulture is to dig intently for ten minutes in all directions, to make himself very red in the face, and then to call Dick, Tom, or Harry, any under-gardener who may be near, and say, "Here, do it, will you?" Nevertheless, he retains the belief that he is the creator and cultivator of this his garden, as M. Grevy believes that he is the chief person in the French Republic; and he takes Mme. Sabaroff to admire it.

"It would look better if it were a little more in order," she permits herself to observe.

"Oh, that's their fault," says the Babe, just as M. Grevy would say of disorder in the Chambers, the Babe meaning Dick, Tom or Harry, as the President would mean Clemenceau, Rochefort, or M. de Mun. (To be continued.)

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The life of love needs no label. Ideals and ambitions are easily mixed.

A fad is an ornament that will fit only a fool.

The loss of one flower may be the gift of many seeds.

It is easy to mistake an empty mind for an open ear.

Some seem to think that the tree of life has a soft soap bark.

Duty is never done by dreaming of it.

A small religion will never draw big men.

The only way to feel right is to do right.

The shift worker is never shifted up.

It takes more than polishing to make men shine.

Faith is more than taking every one at his face value.

Much of our education is only an attempt to polish putty.

Few things have less feeling than the piety that is all feeling.

The louder the pious puffing the less the heavenward hauling.

When sin prates of liberty it means freedom to make salves of some.

It may be better to lift up a man's heart than to take up his load.

Men are never safe so long as they think only of saving themselves.

The demand that God take us seriously takes a lot of faith to make.

Wisdom is great wealth, but too many think that wealth must be wisdom.

Many think they strengthen their hope of heaven by their despair for earth.

Mockery is the refuge of the small mind before that which is can not measure.

Better only the temple in the heart than to go to a temple without your heart.

The longing for power to do right ought to be more than that for pardon for wrong.

Too many battalions are fighting the good fight of faith with flags instead of firearms.

Progress is to be known by developing consciousness of the unattained.

When a man always does what he wants no one wants what he does.

You are not getting ready to shine in glory by withholding your light here.

Grunting would not be so much of a sin if the grunters did not demand an audience.

Repentance may have tears, but it is never genuine with endeavor for better things.

The blessing of prayer is not a reward for telling the omniscient all about our neighbors.

Most fads are winnowing winds, the less the weight the greater the speed with which they are followed.

Some men are sure they were meant for a better world because they have made such a mess of this one.

"With Hindoos, perhaps," says Gervase.

"With our own women," says his cousin. "Lady Mary Jardine died of a broken heart because he wouldn't look at her."

"Pray spare me the roll-call of his victims," says Lord Gervase, irritably; he is passionately jealous of Blanford. He himself had forgotten Xenia Sabaroff, and forgotten all his obligations to her, when she had been, as he always had believed, within reach of his hand if he stretched it out; but viewed as a woman whom other men wooed and another man might win, she has become to him intensely to be desired and to be disputed. He has been a spoiled child of fortune and of the drawing-rooms all his years, and the slightest opposition is intolerable to him.

"I have no doubt," continues Dorothy Usk, gently, continuing her embroidery of a South Kensington design of lilies and palm-leaves, "that if he were aware you had a prior claim, if he thought or knew that you had ever enjoyed her sympathy, he would immediately withdraw and leave the field; he is a very proud man, with all his carelessness, and would not, I think, care to be second to anybody in the affections of a woman whom he seriously sought."

"What do you mean?" asks Gervase, abruptly, pausing in his walk to and fro in the boudoir.

"Only what I say," she answers. "If you wish to eloigner Blanford, give him some idea of the truth."

Gervase laughs a little. "On my honor," he thinks, with a me bitterness, "for sheer uncompromising meanness there is nothing comparable to the suggestions which a woman will make to you."

"I couldn't do that," he says, aloud. "What would he think of me?"

"My dear Alan," replies Dorothy Usk, impatiently, getting her silks in a tangle, "when a man has behaved to any woman as you, by your own account, have behaved to Madame Sabaroff, I think it is a little late in the day to pretend to much elevation of feeling."

"You do not understand—" "I have always found," says his cousin, impatiently searching for shades of silk which she does not see, "that whenever we presume to pronounce an opinion on any man's conduct and think ill of it we are always told that we don't understand anything. When we flatter the man, or compliment him on his conduct, there is no end to the marvellous powers of our penetration, the fineness of our instincts, the accuracy of our intuitions." Gervase does not hear; his thoughts are elsewhere; he is thinking

"cause of the ivy. Oh, there's the princess on Satan—nobody else could ride Satan; Lord Blanford put her up, and now he's riding by her. They're gone now—and papa's stopping behind to do something to Bopeep's girths." Whereat the dutiful Oodo laughs rudely, as she laughed coming home from church.

The sound of the horses' hoofs going farther away down the avenue comes through the stillness, as her voice and her laughter cease.

"What a shame to be shut up here just because one isn't old!" she groans, as she listens enviously. The sun is pouring liquid gold through the ivy-leaves, the air is hot and fragrant, gardeners are watering the flower-beds below, and the sweet, moist scent comes up to Dodo's nostrils and makes her writhe with longing to get out; rot that she is by any means ardently devoted to nature, but she loves life, movement, gaiety, and she dearly loves showing off her figure on her pony and being flirted with by her father's friends.

"I am sure Lord Blanford is in love with her; awfully in love," she says, as she peers into the distance, where the black form of Satan is just visible through far-off oak-boughs.

"With whom?" asks Lilie, getting up from her caricature to lean also out over the ivy.

"Xenia," says Dodo. She is very proud of calling her friend Xenia. "Take care Goggles don't wake, or she'll see what you've been doing."

The lady from Deutschland was always known to them by this endearing epithet.

"I don't care," says Lilie, kicking her bronze boots in the air. "Do you think she'll marry Lord Blanford?"

"Who? Goggles?" "The idea?" They laugh deliciously.

"You say he's in love with Xenia. If they're in love they will marry," says Lilie, pensively.

"No, they won't; people who are in love never marry," replies Dodo.

"What do they do, then?" inquires the younger sister.

"They marry somebody else, and ask the one they like to go and stay with them. It is much better," she adds. "It is what I shall do."

"Why is it better? It's a round-about way," objects Lilie. "I shouldn't care to marry at all," she adds, "only one can't ever be Mistress of the Robes if one doesn't."

"Oh, everybody marries, of course; only some miff it, and don't get all they want by it," replies the cynic Dodo.

"El l'amour, Miladi Alexandra?" says the French governess, entering at that moment. "Ou donc mettez-vous l'amour?"

"Nous ne sommes pas des bourgeois," returns Dodo, very haughtily.

The Babe, sitting astride on a chair, trying to mend his mechanical Punch, who screamed and beat his wife absolutely comme la nature, as the French governess said, before he was broken, hears the discourse of his sisters and muses on it. He is very fond of Blanford, and he adores his princess; he would like them to live together, and he would go and see them without his sisters, who tease him, and without Boom, who lords it over him. Into his busy and precocious little brain there enters the resolution to pousser la machine, as his governess would call it.

"Some men are sure they were meant for a better world because they have made such a mess of this one."

LIFE ONE CONTINUAL PICNIC.

Inventor Tells of Future Houses and Food.

There will be no water bugs or mice for the housewife to fight in the future, for she will live in a cement house into which they cannot penetrate. It will take just six hours to build it. "I believe," says the inventor, "that a house can be erected complete with plumbing and heating apparatus for $1,200 on land underlaid with sand and gravel. Every house would be different, but in this priced house the general plan would be twenty-five by thirty feet. There would be three stories, a cellar and six large living and sleeping rooms. There will be airy halls and a bathroom. Such a house as this would stand on lot forty by sixty feet."

In the vision outlined by the inventor these houses, all of them different in shape and design, will stand on a succession of wide lawns with blooming beds of flowers. These will all combine into flowered towns in which there will be no animals either harnessed or running loose. "The worst use of money is to make a fine thoroughfare and then turn it over to horses," says Edison. "The cow and the pigs are gone and the horse is still more undesirable."

Life is to be one continual picnic as far as cooking and eating is concerned, for besides the improved cooking facilities the food will all come in packages. In this way it will be partly prepared and there won't be anything to put into the garbage box. More wonderful still there won't be any marketing, in the ordinary sense, and there will be no bother running to the door to answer the grocery man.

BABIES' SORES IN WINTER.

Mothers Should Know About Zam-Buk.

Every mother should realize that the skin of her baby is so tender that the secretions of the body often lead to rashes, eruptions, etc., all of which may be removed by Zam-Buk. Scores of restless, crying babies, upon examination are found to be suffering from some form of skin irritation or "heat." Don't let baby suffer when Zam-Buk will cure!

Often, too, in winter, the little ones suffer from chaps on the chin, hands, or other parts of the body. Zam-Buk applied after the bath, and at intervals during the day, will prevent all trouble.

Mrs. L. Wood, of 475 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, says: "Some nasty sores broke out around my baby's mouth, and despite all the preparations used, they refused to heal. I took him to St. Boniface Hospital and he remained there for two weeks. At the end of that time he was no better, and we again took him home. I was then advised to try Zam-Buk and obtained a supply. The effect of the first few applications was very gratifying, and a little perseverance resulted in a complete cure."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bites, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

TELLS THE PUBLIC THE REASON WHY

QUEBEC MAN CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Of Rheumatism, Gravel and Diabetes—Says he wants other sufferers to have the benefit of his experience.

Rousseau Mills, Portneuf Co., Que., Nov. 21 (Special).—"Tell the public Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Gravel, Rheumatism and Diabetes." These are the words of Seraphim Carpentier, of this place. "For ten years I suffered," Mr. Carpentier continues. "Then I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and decided to try them. Almost from the first they relieved me and now all my Gravel, Diabetes and Rheumatism have entirely left me."

"I want others to know what cured me, because I do not want them to suffer as I have suffered."

There are thousands of just such living proofs in Canada that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Kidney Disease. If you take the disease early they will cure it easily and quickly and you will be saved much suffering. If you have neglected it and let it reach its more dangerous stages, such as Gravel, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it. They never fail.

"Hello, Jones! You wearing glasses? What's that for?" Jones, annoyed at the foolishness of the question, answered irritably, "Corns!"

FRUITLESS STRUGGLING.

"I understand that after waiting 20 years, she married a struggling young man?"

"Yes, poor chap. He struggled the best he knew how, but she landed him."

"Do you think, sir," asked the waiter, helping the guest on with his coat, "that lightning even strikes twice in the same place?" "Yes, I guess it does," answered the departing diner. "Well, sir—the gentleman who sat at this table before you came in gave me a 50-cent tip, sir." "Ah, indeed. And you think there may be a chance that he'd come back to-morrow? I doubt it. Good-night!"

She—Father believes in the pleasures of anticipation. He—Do you agree with him? She—Oh, yes, indeed! In the summer he promises to buy me a sealskin coat the following winter if I'll give up going to the seaside, and in the winter he promises to send me to the seaside the following summer if I give up the sealskin coat. So, you see, I am always happy.

HOW TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A Great Sufferer from Indigestion Tells How She Was Cured.

Stomach trouble is a general name for all forms of indigestion, whether great pain after eating, belching of wind, heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, or the sharp pains that often make you think you have heart trouble. There are two things noticeable in indigestion. One is that doctors always find indigestion a prominent symptom in a bloodless, run-down state. The other, that sufferers usually find relief when a tonic is taken that restores the general health. Without a doubt stomach trouble is simply stomach weakness, and the cure is to make the stomach strong enough to digest food without trouble. Any other treatment is patchwork and cannot cure. As the processes of digestion are controlled by the blood and nerves, the stomach that is too weak to digest food needs a tonic to give it strength. And in all the world there is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich blood, tone the nerves and so strengthen the stomach and all the bodily functions. We submit the following as proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble. Mrs. John Graf, Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says: "For years I suffered great torture from indigestion. I took many different medicines, but instead of benefitting me I was growing worse all the time, till my stomach got so bad I could neither eat nor drink without pain. Even cold water would cause me suffering. Nor did I get any relief when the stomach was empty, as I still suffered from a horrid burning pain." I went to Edmonton and consulted one of the best doctors there, but he told me that he could do nothing for me, that all I could do was to diet. For some time I took only hot water and a small piece of brown bread for my meals, but even that did not help me and I got so weak and run down that I despaired of ever being well again. I bought a so-called electric belt and wore it for six months, but it was simply money wasted. Then one day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did not know they were intended to cure indigestion, but being assured that they were, decided to try them. I soon found the Pills helping me, but my condition was so bad when I began using them that I continued taking the Pills for about five months before I felt that I was completely cured. Then I could eat any kind of food, and although more than two years have passed since my cure, I have not since had the least sign of the trouble. I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this terrible trouble."

WHY A CAT FALLS ON ITS FEET

Affected by the Vigorous Rotation of Its Tail.

A scientist has constructed an ingenious model to show why a cat in falling invariably alights on its feet, says the London Globe. This model, roughly speaking, consists of a cardboard cylinder wherein are stuck four rods to serve for legs, together with a tail devised on similar principles. The object of the experiment is to show that a feline's peculiar faculty depends on the rotation of its tail with sufficient vigor.

This faculty is specially developed by climbing and leaping animals, such as members of the cat tribe, monkeys, squirrels, rats and most lemurs. As already stated, the tail plays an important part in the turning process. According to the investigator all tree inhabiting monkeys have long tails, and there is not the slightest doubt that these tails are of great aid to all climbers in enabling them to turn in the air. The tail also serves as a balancer, as evidenced in the case of a squirrel, which may be seen walking along a tightly stretched wire or string swinging its tail from side to side much after the manner of a tight rope walker balancing himself with a pole.

WORLD FIXED ON TREE.

Strange Beliefs of Pigmy-like Dwellers in Isles Near India.

In the Bay of Bengal, on the east coast of India, lie the Andamans Islands, a British penal settlement, whose inhabitants are savage aborigines. These Andamanese roam continually through the forests, putting up shelters of leaves and twigs wherever they camp. They are not unlike the pigmies of the Congo, having black skins and frizzly hair, which is so shaved as to leave a circular patch as big around as a tin cup on the top of the head. The women are the barbers, and every wife dresses her husband's hair. Both women and men are tattooed, and wear practically no clothing.

When the English officers first came to the Andamans the natives were cannibals clad chiefly in a mud of red earth. They worshipped a god who was an evil spirit, spreading disease. They believed the whole earth was flat; this world was balanced on top of a very tall tree, which at the last day will be loosened by an earthquake. When that comes to pass they believe that the living and dead will change places and that the angels and devils will keep shaking the tree and thus prevent mankind from going up the bamboo ladder which connects it with heaven.

When a man bumps into a brand of trouble worth talking about he has but little to say about it.

Missionaries in All Lands are friends of Painkiller. Hundreds of letters testify to the fact. For accidents and sudden emergencies, such as sprains, cuts and bruises, they find it invaluable. A good substitute, there is but one "Painkiller."—Perry Davis—25c and 50c.

"Does the De Paysters' new baby show his aristocratic origin?" "He sure does. He tries to put his teething ring in his eye—thinks it's a monocle."

Internally and Externally it is Good.—The crowning property of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is that it can be used internally for many complaints as well as externally. For sore throat, croup, whooping cough, pains in the chest, colic and many kindred ailments it has curative qualities that are unsurpassed. A bottle of it costs little and there is no loss in always having it at hand.

THE INK PLANT.

The ink of everyday life may be perhaps described as of mixed animal, vegetable and mineral origin. Sometimes, however, the juice of a plant can be used directly for writing. This is the case with the ink plant, which occurs in South America and New Zealand. The juice of the plant is red, but it becomes rapidly black on exposure by oxidation. It gives a permanent stain on paper and can be used as ink without further preparation. All the early documents in Spanish South America were written with the juice of the ink plant.

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER XII.—(Cont'd)

Gervase smiled, conscious of his past successes and willing to acknowledge them.

"But you see she does not sigh!" he murmurs, with a sense that the admission is not flattering to his own amour-propre.

"You have lost the power to make her sigh, do you mean?"

"I make no impression on her at all. I am utterly unable to imagine her feelings, her sentiments,—how much she would acknowledge, how much she would ignore."

"That is a confession of great helpfulness! I should never have believed that you would be baffled by any woman, above all by a woman who once loved you."

"It is not easy to make a fire out of ashes."

"Not if the ashes are quite cold, certainly; but if a spark remains in them, the fire soon comes again."

He is silent; the apparent indifference of a person whom he believed to be living out her life in solitude, occupied only with his memory, annoys and mortifies him. He has never doubted his own power to write his name indelibly on the hearts of women.

"Perhaps she wishes to marry Blanford?" suggests Dorothy Usk.

"Pshaw!" says Lord Gervase.

"Why pshaw?" repeats his cousin, persistently. "He would not be a man to my taste, and he hates marriage, and he has a set of Hindoos at St. Hubert's Lea, which would require as much cleaning as the Augean stable; but I dare say she doesn't know anything about them, and he may be persuading her that he thinks marriage opens the doors of Paradise; men can so easily pretend that sort of thing! A great many men have wanted to marry her, I believe, since she came back into the world after her seclusion. George declares that Blanford is quite serious."

"Preposterous!" replies Lord Gervase.

"Really, I don't see that," replies his judicious cousin. "A great many women have wanted to marry him, though one wonders why. Indeed, I have heard some of them declare that he is wholly irresistible when he chooses."

"With Hindoos, perhaps," says Gervase.

"With our own women," says his cousin. "Lady Mary Jardine died of a broken heart because he wouldn't look at her."

"Pray spare me the roll-call of his victims," says Lord Gervase, iring of Xenia Sabaroff as he saw her first in the Salle des Palmiers in the Winter Palace,—a mere girl, a mere child, startled and made nervous by the admiration she excited and the homage she received, under the brutality of her husband, the raillery of her friends; but that time is long ago, very long, as the life of women counts, and Xenia Sabaroff is now perfect mistress of her own emotions, if emotions she ever feels. Gervase cannot for one moment tell whether the past is tenderly remembered by her, is utterly forgotten, or is only recalled to be touched and dismissed without regret. He is a vain man, but vanity has no power to reassure him here.

In the warm afternoon of the next day the children are in the school-room, supposed to be preparing their lessons for the morrow; but the German governess, who is alone as guardian of order in the temple of intellect, has fallen asleep, with flies buzzing about her blonde hair, and her blue spectacles pushed up on her forehead, and Dodo has taken advantage of the fact to go and lean out of one of the windows, while her sister draws a caricature of the sleeping virgin from Deutschland, and the Babe slips away from his books to a mechanical Punch, which, contraband in the school-room, is far dearer to him than his Gradus and rule of three.

Dodo, with her hands thrust among her abundant locks, lolls with half her body in the air, and, by twisting her neck almost to dislocation, manages to see round an ivy-grown buttress of the east wall, and to spy people who are getting on their horses at the south doors of the building.

"They are going out riding and I am shut up here!" she groans. "Oh, what a while it takes one to grow up!"

"Who are going to ride?" asks Lillie, too fascinated by her drawing to leave it.

"Lots of them," replies Dodo, who speaks four languages, and her own worst of all. "All of them, pretty nearly. Mamma's on Pepper, and Lady Waverley's got Bo-peep—she's always nervous, you know. I can't see very much, 'cause of the ivy. Oh, there's the princess on Satan—nobody else could ride Satan; Lord Blanford put her up, and now he's riding by her. They're gone now—and papa's stopping behind to do something to Bo-peep's girths." Whereat the dutiful Dodo laughs rudely, as she

The Babe has a vast idea of his own resources in the way of speech and invention, and he has his mother's tendencies to interfere with other people's affairs, and is quite of an opinion that if he had the management of most things he should better them. He has broken his Parisian Punch in his endeavor to make it say more words than it could say, but this slight accident does not affect his own admiration and belief in his own powers, any more than to have brought a great and prosperous empire within measurable distance of civil war affects a statesman's conviction that he is the only person who can rule that empire. The Babe, like Mr. Gladstone, is in his own eyes infallible. Like the astute diplomatist he is, he waits for a good opportunity; he is always where the ladies are, and his sharp little wits have been preternaturally quickened in that atmosphere of what the French call "l'odeur feminine."

He has to wait some days for his occasion. The frank and friendly intercourse which existed at first between Blanford and Mme Sabaroff is altered; they are never alone, and the pleasant discussions on poets and poetry, on philosophers and follies, in the gardens in the forenoon are discontinued, neither could very well say why, but the presence of Gervase, chills and oppresses both of them and keeps them apart. She has the burden of memory, he the burden of suspicion; and suspicion is a thing so hateful and intolerable to the nature of Blanford that it makes him miserable to feel himself guilty of it.

But one morning the Babe coaxes her out to go with him to his garden—a floral republic, where a cabbage comes up cheek by jowl with a gloxinia, and plants are plucked up by the roots to see if they are growing aright. The Babe's system of horticulture is to dig intently for ten minutes in all directions, to make himself very red in the face, and then to call Dick, Tom, or Harry, any under-gardener who may be near, and say, "Here, do it, will you?" Nevertheless, he retains the belief that he is the creator and cultivator of this his garden, as M. Grevy believes that he is the chief person in the French Republic; and he takes Mme Sabaroff to admire it.

"It would look better if it were a little more in order," she permits herself to observe.

"Oh, that's their fault," says the Babe, just as M. Grevy would say of disorder in the Chambers, the Babe meaning Dick, Tom or Harry, as the President would mean Clemenceau, Rochefort, or M. de Mun.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

The life of love needs no label. Ideals and ambitions are easily mixed.

A fad is an ornament that will fit only a fool.

Looks do not make lives, but lives make looks.

We seldom know our besetting sins when we meet them.

The loss of one flower may be the gift of many seeds.

It is easy to mistake an empty mind for an open eye.

Some seem to think that the tree of life has a soft soap bark.

Duty is never done by dreaming of it.

A small religion will never draw big men.

The only way to feel right is to do right.

The shifty worker is never shifted up.

It takes more than polishing to make men shine.

Faith is more than taking every one at his face value.

Much of our education is only an attempt to polish putty.

Few things have less feeling than the piety that is all feeling.

The louder the pious puffing the less the heavenward hauling.

When sin prates of liberty it means freedom to make salves of some.

It may be better to lift up a man's heart than to take up his load.

Men are never safe so long as they think only of saving themselves.

The demand that God take us seriously takes a lot of faith to make.

Wisdom is great wealth, but too many think that wealth must be wisdom.

Many think they strengthen their hope of heaven by their despair for earth.

Mockery is the refuge of the small mind before that which is can not measure.

Better only the temple in the heart than to go to a temple without your heart.

The longing for power to do right ought to be more than that for pardon for wrong.

Too many battalions are fighting the good fight of faith with flags instead of firearms.

Progress is to be known by developing consciousness of the unattained.

When a man always does what he wants no one wants what he does.

You are not getting ready to shine in glory by withholding your light here.

Grunting would not be so much of a sin if the grunTERS did not demand an audience.

Repentance may have tears, but it is never genuine with endeavor for better things.

The blessing of prayer is not a reward for telling the omniscient all about our neighbors.

Most fads are winnowing winds, the less the weight the greater the speed with which they are followed.

Some men are sure they were meant for a better world because they have made such a mess of this one.

Ont.: Mrs.

Gervase. "With our own women," says his cousin. "Lady Mary Jardine died of a broken heart because he wouldn't look at her." "Pray spare me the roll-call of his victims," says Lord Gervase, irritably; he is passionately jealous of Blanford. He himself had forgotten Xenia Sabaroff, and forgotten all his obligations to her, when she had been, as he always had believed, within reach of his hand if he stretched it out; but viewed as a woman whom other men wooed and another man might win, she has become to him intensely to be desired and to be disputed. He has been a spoiled child of fortune and of the drawing-rooms all his years, and the slightest opposition is intolerable to him.

"I have no doubt," continues Dorothy Usk, gently, continuing her embroidery of a South Kensington design of lilies and palm-leaves, "that if he were aware you had a prior claim, if he thought or knew that you had ever enjoyed her sympathy, he would immediately withdraw and leave the field; he is a very proud man, with all his carelessness, and would not, I think, care to be second to anybody in the affections of a woman whom he seriously sought."

"What do you mean?" asks Gervase, abruptly, pausing in his walk to and fro in the boudoir.

"Only what I say," she answers. "If you wish to elope with Blanford, give him some idea of the truth."

Gervase laughs a little. "On my honor," he thinks, with a me bitterness, "for sheer uncompromising meanness there is nothing comparable to the suggestions which a woman will make to you."

"I couldn't do that," he says, aloud. "What would he think of me?"

"My dear Alan," replies Dorothy Usk, impatiently, getting her silks in a tangle, "when a man has behaved to any woman as you, by your own account, have behaved to Madame Sabaroff, I think it is a little late in the day to pretend to much elevation of feeling."

"You do not understand—"

"I have always found," says his cousin, impatiently searching for shades of silk which she does not see, "that whenever we presume to pronounce an opinion on any man's conduct and think ill of it we are always told that we don't understand anything. When we flatter the man, or compliment him on his ~~conduct~~, there is no end to the marvellous powers of our penetration, the fineness of our instincts, the accuracy of our institutions."

Gervase does not hear; his thoughts are elsewhere; he is thinking of Satan; Lord Blanford put her up, and now he's riding by her. They're gone now—and papa's stopping behind to do something to Boopee's girths. "Whereat the dutiful Oodo laughs rudely, as she laughed coming home from church. The sound of the horses' hoofs going farther away down the avenue comes through the stillness, as her voice and her laughter cease."

"What a shame to be shut up here just because one isn't old!" she groans, as she listens enviously. The sun is pouring liquid gold through the ivy-leaves, the air is hot and fragrant, gardeners are watering the flower-beds below, and the sweet, moist scent comes up to Dodo's nostrils and makes her writhe with longing to get out; not that she is by any means ardently devoted to nature, but she loves life, movement, gayety, and she dearly loves showing off her figure on her pony and being flattered with by her father's friends.

"I am sure Lord Blanford is in love with her; awfully in love," she says, as she peers into the distance, where the black form of Satan is just visible through far-off oak-boughs.

"With whom?" asks Lillie, getting up from her caricature to lean also out over the ivy.

"Xenia," says Dodo. She is very proud of calling her friend Xenia. "Take care Goggles don't wake her, she'll see what you've been doing."

The lady from Deutschland was always known to them by this endearing epithet.

"I don't care," says Lillie, kicking her bronze boots in the air. "Do you think she'll marry Lord Blanford?"

"Who? Goggles?"

"The idea?" They laugh deliciously.

"You say he's in love with Xenia. They're in love they will marry," says Lillie, pensively.

"No, they won't; people who are in love never marry," repeats Dodo.

"What do they do, then?" inquires the younger sister.

"They marry somebody else, and ask the one they like to go and stay with them. It is much better," she adds. "It is what I shall do."

"Why is it better? It's a round-about way," objects Lillie. "I shouldn't care to marry at all," she adds, "only one can't ever be Mistress of the Robes if one doesn't."

"Oh, everybody marries, of course; only some muffs it, and don't get all they want by it," replies the cynic Dodo.

"El l'amour, Miladi Alexandra?" says the French governess, entering at that moment. "Ou donc mettez-vous l'amour?"

"Nous ne sommes pas des Bourgeoises," returns Dodo, very haughtily.

The Babe, sitting astride on a chair, trying to mend his mechanical Punch, who screamed and beat his wife absolument comme la nature, as the French governess said, before he was broken, hears the discourse of his sisters and muses on it. He is very fond of Blanford, and he adores his princess; he would like them to live together, and he would go and see them without his sisters, who tease him, and without Boom, who lords it over him. "Why is it better? It's a round-about way," objects Lillie. "I shouldn't care to marry at all," she adds, "only one can't ever be Mistress of the Robes if one doesn't."

"Oh, everybody marries, of course; only some muffs it, and don't get all they want by it," replies the cynic Dodo.

"El l'amour, Miladi Alexandra?" says the French governess, entering at that moment. "Ou donc mettez-vous l'amour?"

"Nous ne sommes pas des Bourgeoises," returns Dodo, very haughtily.

The Babe, sitting astride on a chair, trying to mend his mechanical Punch, who screamed and beat his wife absolument comme la nature, as the French governess said, before he was broken, hears the discourse of his sisters and muses on it. He is very fond of Blanford, and he adores his princess; he would like them to live together, and he would go and see them without his sisters, who tease him, and without Boom, who lords it over him. Into his busy and precocious little brain there enters the resolution to pousser la machine, as his governess would call it.

"What do they do, then?" inquires the younger sister.

"They marry somebody else, and ask the one they like to go and stay with them. It is much better," she adds. "It is what I shall do."

"Why is it better? It's a round-about way," objects Lillie. "I shouldn't care to marry at all," she adds, "only one can't ever be Mistress of the Robes if one doesn't."

"Oh, everybody marries, of course; only some muffs it, and don't get all they want by it," replies the cynic Dodo.

"El l'amour, Miladi Alexandra?" says the French governess, entering at that moment. "Ou donc mettez-vous l'amour?"

"Nous ne sommes pas des Bourgeoises," returns Dodo, very haughtily.

LIFE ONE CONTINUAL PICNIC.

Inventor Tells of Future Houses and Food.

There will be no water bugs or mice for the housewife to fight in the future, for she will live in a cement house into which they cannot penetrate. It will take just six hours to build it. "I believe," says the inventor, "that a house can be erected complete with plumbing and heating apparatus for $1,200 on land underlaid with sand and gravel. Every house would be different, but in this priced house the general plan would be twenty-five by thirty feet. There would be three stories, a cellar and six large living and sleeping rooms. There will be airy halls and a bathroom. Such a house as this would stand on lot forty by sixty feet."

In the vision outlined by the inventor these houses, all of them different in shape and design, will stand on a succession of wide lawns with blooming beds of flowers. These will all combine into flowered towns in which there will be no animals either harnessed or running loose. "The worst use of money is to make a fine thoroughfare and then turn it over to horses," says Edison. "The cow and the pigs are gone and the horse is still more undesirable."

Life is to be one continual picnic as far as cooking and eating is concerned, for besides the improved cooking facilities the food will all come in packages. In this way it will be partly prepared and there won't be anything to put into the garbage box. More wonderful still there won't be any marketing, in the ordinary sense, and there will be no bother running to the door to answer the grocery man.

BABIES' SORES IN WINTER.

Mothers Should Know About Zam-Buk.

Every mother should realize that the skin of her baby is so tender that the secretions of the body often lead to rashes, eruptions, etc., all of which may be removed by Zam-Buk. Scores of restless, crying babies, upon examination are found to be suffering from some form of skin irritation or "heat." Don't let baby suffer when Zam-Buk will cure!

Often, too, in winter, the little ones suffer from chaps on the chin, hands, or other parts of the body. Zam-Buk applied after the bath, and at intervals during the day, will prevent all trouble.

Mrs. L. Wood, of 475 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, says: "Some nasty sores broke out around my baby's mouth, and despite all the preparations used, they refused to heal. I took him to St. Boniface Hospital and he remained there for two weeks. At the end of that time he was no better, and we again took him home. I was then advised to try Zam-Buk and obtained a supply. The effect of the first few applications was very gratifying, and a little perseverance resulted in a complete cure."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bites, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

TELLS THE PUBLIC THE REASON WHY

QUEBEC MAN CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Of Rheumatism, Gravel and Diabetes—Says he wants other sufferers to have the benefit of his experience.

Rousseau Mills, Portneuf Co., Que., Nov. 21 (Special).—Tell the public Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me of Gravel, Rheumatism and Diabetes. These are the words of Seraphin Carpentier, of this place. "For ten years I suffered," Mr. Carpentier continues. "Then I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and decided to try them." Almost from the first they relieved me and now all my Gravel, Diabetes and Rheumatism have entirely left me.

"I want others to know what cured me, because I do not want them to suffer as I have suffered."

There are thousands of just such living proofs in Canada that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Kidney Disease. If you take the disease early they will cure it easily and quickly and you will be saved much suffering. If you have neglected it and let it reach its more dangerous stages, such as Gravel, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it. They never fail.

THE REASON.

Stupid and useless questions sometimes exasperate to the point of rudeness.

"Hello, Jones! You wearing glasses! What's that for?" Jones, annoyed at the foolishness of the question, answered irritably, "Corns!"

FRUITLESS STRUGGLING.

"I understand that after waiting 20 years, she married a struggling young man!"

"Yes, poor chap. He struggled the best he knew how, but she landed him."

"Do you think, sir," asked the waiter, helping the guest on with his coat, "that lightning ever strikes twice in the same place?" "Yes, I guess it does," answered the departing diner. "Well, sir—the gentleman who sat at this table before you came in gave me a 50-cent tip, sir." "Ah, indeed. And you think there may be a chance that he'd come back to-morrow? I doubt it. Good-night!"

She—Father believes in the pleasures of anticipation. He—Do you agree with him? She—Oh, yes, indeed! In the summer he promises to buy me a sealskin coat the following winter if I'll give up going to the seaside, and in the winter he promises to send me to the seaside the following summer if I give up the sealskin coat. So, you see, I am always happy.

HOW TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A Great Sufferer from Indigestion Tells How She Was Cured.

Stomach trouble is a general name for all forms of indigestion, whether great pain after eating, belching of wind, heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, or the sharp pains that often make you think you have heart trouble. There are two things noticeable in indigestion. One is that doctors always find indigestion a prominent symptom in a bloodless, run-down state. The other, that sufferers usually find relief when a tonic is taken that restores the general health. Without a doubt stomach trouble is simply stomach weakness, and the cure is to make the stomach strong enough to digest food without trouble. Any other treatment is patch-work and cannot cure. As the processes of digestion are controlled by the blood and nerves, the stomach that is too weak to digest food needs a tonic to give it strength. And in all the world there is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich blood, tone the nerves and so strengthen the stomach and all the bodily functions. We submit the following as proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble. Mrs. John Graf, Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says: "For years I suffered great torture from indigestion. I took many different medicines, but instead of benefitting me I was growing worse all the time, till my stomach got so bad I could neither eat nor drink without pain. Even cold water would cause me suffering. Nor did I get any relief when the stomach was empty, as I still suffered from a horrid burning pain." I went to Edmonton and consulted one of the best doctors there, but he told me that he could do nothing for me, that all I could do was to diet. For some time I took only hot water and a small piece of brown bread for my meals, but even that did not help me and I got so weak and run down that I despaired of ever being well again. I bought a so-called electric belt and wore it for six months, but it was simply money wasted. Then one day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did not know they were intended to cure indigestion, but being assured that they were, decided to try them. I soon found the Pills helping me, but my condition was so bad when I began using them that I continued taking the Pills for about five months before I felt that I was completely cured. Then I could eat any kind of food, and although more than two years have passed since my cure, I have not since had the least sign of the trouble. I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this terrible trouble."

WHY A CAT FALLS ON ITS FEET

Affected by the Vigorous Rotation of Its Tail.

A scientist has constructed an ingenious model to show why a cat in falling invariably alights on its feet, says the London Globe. This model, roughly speaking, consists of a cardboard cylinder wherein are stuck four rods to serve for legs, together with a tail devised on similar principles. The object of the experiment is to show that a feline's peculiar faculty depends on the rotation of its tail with sufficient vigor.

This faculty is specially developed by climbing and leaping animals, such as members of the cat tribe, monkeys, squirrels, rats and most lemurs. As already stated, the tail plays an important part in the turning process. According to the investigator all tree inhabiting monkeys have long tails, and there is not the slightest doubt that these tails are of great aid to all climbers in enabling them to turn in the air. The tail also serves as a balancer, as evidenced in the case of a squirrel, which may be seen walking along a tightly stretched wire or string swinging its tail from side to side much after the manner of a tight rope walker balancing himself with a pole.

WORLD FIXED ON TREE.

Strange Beliefs of Pigmy-like Dwellers in Isles Near India.

In the Bay of Bengal, on the east coast of India, lie the Andaman Islands, a British penal settlement, whose inhabitants are savage aborigines. These Andamanese roam continually through the forests, putting up shelters of leaves and twigs wherever they camp. They are not unlike the pigmies of the Congo, having black skins and frizzly hair, which is so shaved as to leave a circular patch as big around as a tin cup on the top of the head. The women are the barbers, and every wife dresses her husband's hair. Both women and men are tattooed, and wear practically no clothing.

When the English officers first came to the Andamans the natives were cannibals clad chiefly in a mud of red earth. They worshipped a god who was an evil spirit, spreading disease. They believed the whole earth was flat; this world was balanced on top of a very tall tree, which at the last day will be loosened by an earthquake. When that comes to pass they believe that the living and dead will change places and that the angels and devils will keep shaking the tree and thus prevent mankind from going up the bamboo ladder which connects it with heaven.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE.

Mothers are always willing to shower their praises on a medicine that not only relieves their precious little ones from pain but removes the cause and keeps them well, bright, active and happy. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. No other medicine for little ones has received such praise from thousands of thankful mothers. These Tablets never fail to relieve the little ills that afflict them. Mrs. Thos. Hodgson, Riviere du Loup,

People Who Work Indoors With Their Hands

Seamstresses, watch-makers, artists, draughtsmen, and many others, cannot properly handle their tools with cold, stiff hands. Many a lost hour or two on cold winter mornings results from the delayed heat of furnace or stove.

quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. Has automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned.

It has a damper top and a cool handle. Indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down; it is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain, and cannot get lost.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for reworking. The Perfection is finished in Japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

A Pleasant Purgative. — Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so compounded as to operate on both the stomach and the bowels, so that they act along the whole alimentary and excretory passage. They are not drastic in their work, but mildly purgative, and the pleasure of taking them is only equalled by the gratifying effect they produce. Compounded only of vegetable substances the curative qualities of which were fully tested, they afford relief without chance of injury.

CURED HIS BLADDER TROUBLE

Mr. Herbert Bauer of Davisville, says he owes Gin Pills a debt of gratitude which he can never repay. He suffered for years with Bladder trouble, and could not pass urine except by much straining, which caused great pain.

Mr. Bauer sent for a free sample of Gin Pills, the first dose did him so much good that he ordered six boxes and began to take them regularly. A month's treatment completely cured him.

For sore throat, croup, whooping cough, pains in the chest, colic and many kindred ailments it has curative qualities that are unsurpassed. A bottle of it costs little and there is no loss in always having it at hand.

THE INK PLANT.

The ink of everyday life may be perhaps described as of mixed animal, vegetable and mineral origin. Sometimes, however, the juice of a plant can be used directly for writing. This is the case with the ink plant, which occurs in South America and New Zealand. The juice of the plant is red, but it becomes rapidly black on exposure by oxidation. It gives a permanent stain on paper and can be used as ink without further preparation. All the early documents in Spanish South America were written with the juice of the ink plant.

Factories Oppose Local Option.

(Special to The Toronto News.)
Welland, Dec. 2.—Believing that local option would be detrimental to the operation of their factories, a number of Welland's largest manufacturers have signified their opposition to the by-law, to be voted on in January.
The factories opposed to the measure are: Ontario Iron and steel Works,
M. Beatty & Sons, foundry; Billings
Spencer factory, Electro Steel Works,
Canada Forge Works, Electro Metals,
Page-Hershel Pipe Mill, Dain Manufacturing Company, Supreme Heating Company.

To-Night.

Friday evening, December 16th, at 8 o'clock, Professor J. L. Morrison, of Queen's University, Kingston, will

A deputation from Frontenac and Addington waited in Toronto last week on representative of the Ontario Government, and asked relief from the flooding of lands because of the work of the Napanee River improvement Co., whose dams have been in the river since 1867. After a conference lasting all forenoon, during which D. M. McIntyre, K. C., of Kingston, presented the case of the residents, and W. D. McPherson, K. C., M. P. P., stated the position of the company, it was finally agreed to have the Government engineer, the company's engineer and the representatives of the residents meet and try to agree on some scheme that would be mutually acceptable. Water in the river has been held back and the lakes are reservoirs for the hydro power schemes of the company. Some time ago A. J. Halford, the engineer of the Public Works Department, was sent to the scene by the Government, and his report recommends certain structural alterations in the dams which will not decrease the power generating capacity but which will require less water, and thus bring the water back nearer its natural level. This scheme does not meet with the approval of the company, and so things have been at a standstill.

Fine Event.

The recital of Miss Luella E. Hall was held in the Town Hall, Thursday evening, 8th inst. The program neatly issued with the invitations gave promise of pleasure to all lovers of music, and in the rendering of the program none were disappointed, even the most critical being enthusiastic in their praises. In a program rendered by 20, many pupils of such difference in age and in attainment, the mention of any particular one would not be in keeping. All did exceedingly well and showed the results of the efficient and painstaking teaching of Miss Hall. The benefit of such public appearance is in itself of great value to the pupils and prepares them for greater self control and more finished teaching. The singing of Miss C. Cairns was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Miss Hall is to be congratulated on the excellence of her work as manifested in this recital.

Toned It Down.

"King Edward," said an English visitor in New York, "hated snobbishness. To show how ridiculous snobbishness was he used often to tell about an alphabet book of his childhood."

"This book had alliterative sentences arranged under each letter, thus:

"Callous Caroline caned a cur cruelly."

"Henry hated the heat of heavy hats."

"Under the letter V came the facetious sentence:

"William Vilkins wiped his veskit."

"But the young prince's snobbish tutors thought this sentence too vulgar and low for their charge and accordingly they substituted for it the more refined and genteel line:

"Vincent Vining viewed a vacant villa."

There's No Risk

If This Medicine Does Not Benefit You Pay Nothing.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistence and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain them only at—The Rexall Store, T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

A Christmassy flavor, with an abundance of light reading, marks the December number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ontario. Included are some notable articles, Mr. Bonnycastle Dale telling of the contrasts to be found at this season on the Pacific Coast as compared with other portions of Canada; while the delights of a canoe trip in New Brunswick with the exhilarating experiences of days of rapid water are well described by Mr. S. B. Bustin. Then there are fishing stories recalling the pleasures of rod and line, Mrs. Charlotte C. Talcott giving voice to the feelings of many who are inevitably led to engage in the proper season in a recreation that has filled some of the happiest hours of their lives. Big game hunters are not forgotten and a paper by Dr. Edward Breck on European and American methods is calculated to give all interested in game problems in this country much food for thought. Crisp, bright verses, with an Old Time story, and many other good things complete a number that for variety and interest is the equal of any that have gone before and well sustains the reputation which the Magazine has achieved.

A TRIBUTE TO OUR LATE VICAR.

On Sunday morning reference was made by Mr. Dudley Hill in St. Mary Magdalene Church to the great loss which the congregation has suffered by the death of their Vicar, and it was pointed out, that this calamity was sent for some good purpose.

It is impossible to believe, that Almighty God, whose name is Love and who is the Author of all goodness, would willingly inflict on His children, a blow which was not intended, ultimately, to work out for the general good.

The loss in undoubtedly hard to bear and it is not easy to see what good can come of it but "God's ways are not our ways" and we need the simple faith in God's goodness, which is the fundamental virtue of every Christian.

There had been some talk of erecting a memorial in the church to the Vicar, which was only right and proper, but the speaker assured the congregation, that the best memorial, which could be erected would be in the hearts and lives of the people.

The Vicar had worked hard, and with considerable success to raise the spiritual tone of the congregation, and to lead them into the strait and narrow way, and if the people wished to raise a memorial, which would be enduring and which would be something very close to the heart of their late Vicar, it would be a determination on the part of each one individually to live an earnest Christian life and to loyally do their duty by that Church, which their Vicar loved so well and served so faithfully.

Bay of Quinte Lodge No. 143, I.O.O.F.
Picton, Dec. 5th, 1910.

To the N. G. Officers and Members of Napanee Lodge No. 86, I.O.O.F.

Brethren:—It was with the deepest regret we learned of the sad accident which occurred in your town, by which an honored brother of your lodge lost his life. Though our acquaintance of Mr. Dibb was very short, we having met him for the first time on our visit to Napanee a few weeks ago, yet we were all impressed with his manly face, which reflected the good within him. In Bro. Dibb's death you have lost a valued member, one of God's noblemen, and we desire to extend to you and through you to the bereaved family His richest blessing and consolations.

Yours in fraternal sympathy,
F. W. MARTIN,
Rec-Sec.

An emergent meeting of Union Lodge, No. 9, A. F. & A. M., was held in Masonic Hall, Napanee, on Tuesday, December 13th, 1910, to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Reverend Frederick Dibb, Chaplain of the lodge. There was a large attendance including visitors from Kingston and Belleville. Very able and sympathetic addresses were delivered. Among the speakers were Rev. F. W. Fitzgerald, of Kingston; Rev. R. C. Blagrove, of Belleville; R. W. Bro. W. S. Herrington, K. C.; W. Bro. G. F. Ruttan, K. C. and R. W. Bro. T. D. Minnes, P.D.D.G.M., of the 14th Masonic District.

plied at the Police Station for a night's lodging. Chief Graham asked him a few questions, and noticed that the man was wearing a new overcoat. The Chief questioned him as to where he bought it. Pierce said he bought it for $8 in Cornwall. The chief turned up the collar of the coat and saw a price ticket on it for $18, also another tag on it. After some cross questioning the man admitted that he had stolen the coat in Belleville. He appeared before the Magistrate and was remanded eight days.

During the week Chief Graham arrested a woman wanted in Belleville for stealing furs, also Wm. Bowen for stealing a horse and buggy from a Kingston livery. Bowen sold the outfit to Mr. R. H. McGuinness, who paid him $25 on account. Mr. McGuinness is out his $25 and Bowen is remanded to gaol for eight days.

Considerable credit is due Chief Graham on the arrest of David Haines, alias Jas. D. Hines, for the numerous burglaries which have taken place in town during the last year. Haines, who has been working in various places around town was a quiet man and one whom no one would suspect of being a burglar. Chief Graham received information that Haines had a large bunch of keys with which he could open any ordinary lock, and the Chief also found he had sold half a dozen silver spoons to a party. On securing the spoons he compared them with those in Mr. Madole's store and they corresponded. A search was made of Haines' rooms and nearly $200 worth of loot was recovered, and the Chief expects to find a good deal more yet. The loot found came from M. S. Madole's, Madill Bros., and Royal Shoe Store. On looking up Haines' record it was found that he had served three terms for burglary in Hamilton, and left a wife there, running away with Mrs. Watson, wife of Edward Watson, Hamilton, with whom he was living here. Haines was arrested and remanded to gaol until to-day, when he will appear before the magistrate.

Market Reports

12 to 18 Hours Ahead of the Morning Papers

Every issue of The Toronto Daily Star contains the day's price quotations on the Grain and Live Stock Markets of Toronto, Montreal, Buffalo, Chicago and other important centres—the very same quotations that the morning papers will print next day—12 to 18 hours later.

The Toronto Daily Star market reports are most accurate, and getting them every day you are always able to catch the market at its highest point and to sell your products at the highest prices prevailing.

To be a daily and constant reader of the Toronto Star market reports means money in your pocket—a live paper for wideawake people.
